POETICAL: Resignation. BY H. W. LONGFELLOW.

There is no flock, however watched and tended But one dead lamb is there!

Let us be patient! These several afflictions Not from the ground arise...

There is no death!—What seems so is transition; This life of mortal breath...

She is not dead—the child of our affection— But gone into that school...

And though at times impetuous with emotion And anguish long suppressed...

From the Pennsylvania Republican. Night upon the Battle Field.

"T was night upon the battle field, The warrior slept beside his shield...

And forth, the night birds plaintive strain Flowed a requiem for the slain...

Their martial music's cheering strains Had died away along the plains...

Sleep calmly, soldier, though they fall Hath laid thee neath a bloody pall...

THE HOUSEKEEPER: RICHARD PIE—Cut the large stalks off when the leaves commence to drop...

EGG DRESSING—Make a batter of a pint of milk, two well beaten eggs...

RICHARD, GOOSEBERRY, PLUM, AND CURRANT PIE—Make a good crust, lay a little round of the dish...

MISCELLANEOUS. THE MECHANIC'S WIFE; Or, the Result of Perseverance.

"Well, Augustus," said Marianne, as the former entered a little room, without carpet, curtain, or ornament of any kind...

"Yes," answered the young husband, trying to smile, as he glanced first at his handsome wife, and then at the little pine supper table...

"I don't know how that can be. Every moment taken from my labor is so much taken from my scanty income. We cannot afford to attend to places of public amusement...

"Oh, yes," said the wife, "we have enough to begin with. Here is our beautiful new gilt Bible, which we must read every morning and evening..."

"I rather think it will," said the husband, beginning to show a little more interest, "but I'm thinking also that my hesitating and blundering manner of reading will not be very edifying to you..."

"Well, suppose you do. I have a Webster's Dictionary, and we will have that open before us, and look out every word of which we do not understand the meaning..."

"Thank you, dear husband, I will gladly accept your offer, if you will let me stay alone one evening in the week, while you attend our excellent Lyceum Lectures..."

"I have no objection to that; but as a compensation for my Bible Class, you must join the L. S. Sewing Circle, and I will take care of you one afternoon in the week so you will be able to attend..."

Philosophy. Employment of Women.

Philosophy has been defined to be the sum total of systematic human knowledge; reflection in a vast form; the complete development of thought; the true and perfect knowledge of things in a word, philosophy is the understanding and the explanation of all things...

The field or empire of philosophy is immense in fact it is universal. It is coextensive with the field of human knowledge. As to the province of geology to consider the nature and formation of the various strata which compose the whole globe, from the surface to the centre, so it is the part of philosophy to investigate and explain the whole universe of thought...

Looking at it then in this extended view, the history of philosophy becomes an interesting one. It takes us back to a period when man was placed upon the earth, ignorant of his own nature, and without experience to guide him. It shows us that as soon as he began to reflect upon the phenomena of nature, and the laws which governed his own being, philosophy was born...

Philosophy may be divided into three great departments—Metaphysics, Physics, and Ethics. The first treats of the nature of being, of the origin and nature of matter, and of the laws which govern the material universe...

The Chaldeans, the Brahmins of India and the Egyptians, all claimed to be the possessors of the philosophy which afterwards spread over the whole world originated. However this may be, it is certain that the Egyptians received an early development among them. The Greeks ascribed their knowledge to them; and we are told by Herodotus, a Greek contemporary of the Egyptians were the first to breach the ideas of the pre-existence, immortality, and transmigration of the soul...

The term Philosopher was first used by the Ionic school. Pythagoras was the founder of the Ionic school. Pythagoras was the founder of the Ionic school. Pythagoras was the founder of the Ionic school...

The great characteristic point in the Greek philosophy was the classification of all things under ten heads, called categories. These categories, they said, comprehended every science and every subject of thought. They were Unity, Quantity, Quality, Relation, Action, Passion, Where, Situation, and Change...

This system of philosophy spread over the whole world, and prevailed through the Scholastic Age. During the revival of letters, the spirit of investigation after truth seemed to be simultaneously awakened throughout Europe. The beginning of the seventeenth century was the era of the fathers of modern philosophy...

The difference between these two schools may be illustrated by the mathematical proposition, that the asymptote of an hyperbole, the further it is produced, approaches nearer the curve, but will never actually meet it. By demonstration directed to REASON, we are so convinced of this as to have no doubt but that the asymptote, or the method, we could never arrive at such a knowledge...

The Marriage Ceremony. An anecdote is related by Mr. Hale, of New Hampshire, in one of his Free Soil speeches, to this effect: "A couple came to me one night, and wished me to join them in wedlock. I consented to perform the ceremony, and said to the man—'Do you take this woman to be your wedded wife?'"

"Certainly," he replied. "Do you take this man to be your lawful husband?" "Yes, I do."

"Then you are man and wife—that's all." Both looked at me with great astonishment, and the lady asked—"Is that all?" "Yes, that's all."

"Well," she remarked, "taint such a mighty affair after all!" "A good old dutchman and wife, had set up till gapping time, when the latter, after a full stretch in the above operation, and replied, 'I wish I was in heaven.'" Hans yawned, and replied, "I wish I was in a still-house."

The battle of Oswego was fought on the 24th of May, 1756.

A Gay Lothario Caged—Jealous Husband.

A rather amusing incident to the public, and somewhat disagreeable to the parties concerned, occurred in the vicinity of Columbia and Smith streets on Friday night, at the residence of a newly married couple. It seems that a gay, dashing young clerk on Pearl street, who sports a fair pair of whiskers, and is a "perfect paragon of a man," determined to call on the object of his heart's affection, but who had displayed him false and married another. The husband was from home, and on his arrival he was received by the fair one, and entertained by a nice de-a-de for a couple of hours, when the lady became uneasy, and desired that the knight of the vast stick should leave, as she expected her husband home every moment, and knowing the unfriendly relations that had existed between them before their marriage, and being of a very jealous disposition, she was fearful, if they should meet at that hour of the night, there would be blood shed, as he always carried a pistol.

While they were conversing the question, to go or not to go, a knock was heard at the door; it was the husband. Here was a dilemma for our Pearl street friend to be in. How was he to escape? At the door was the husband, who would blow out his brains if they should meet; and should he jump from the window he would very likely break his neck. The lady was in a great state of agitation and knew not what to do; and as a despair resort, at last suggested the propriety of getting under the bed, to escape the wrath of the husband, who not liking the idea of being kept knocking at his own door, was becoming very much excited, and pounding away for dear life. Down dropped the poor clerk, with his marrow-bones, and up went the foot valance of the bed, under which he soon disappeared. The wife hastened to her husband in, who, the moment he entered, noticed her agitation, and demanded an explanation for being kept in the street so long. The wife knew not what to say—she was dumfounded. The husband "melt a raised, and immediately went to the bed and raised the valance—when, horrible to relate!—he beheld the Adonis of Pearl street stretched out on the floor, covered with feathers and as pale as a ghost!

Drawing a pistol, he ordered him to come forth, which he did as well as he could, shaking in every limb as if attacked with a severe chill. The wife, now interested in behalf of the poor clerk, but it was of no avail, the green-eyed monster was aroused; he rushed from the room locking the door after him, and returned with officer Shattuck, who took the clerk in charge, and gave him the soft side of a board in one of the cells of the watch-house on which to repose his limbs. The wife explained the matter to the entire satisfaction of the authorities, and promised in future to always face the matter, never hide any one under the bed. In the morning, no one appearing against the clerk, he was permitted to go.

Mrs. Zebedee Smith's Philosophy. Dear me! how expensive it is to be poor—Every time I go out, my best bib and tucker has to go on. If Zebedee was worth a cool million, I might wear a coal-hod on my head, and I choose, my perfect impunity. There was old nabob's wife, who had the lecture the other night, in a dress that might have been made for Noah's great grandnephew. She cut off a yard of silk, and a forty dollar dress, and a hundred dollar shawl. If I go to a concert, I must take the highest priced seat, and I choose, my perfect impunity.
