There's mourning in the household—
There's a wail on the air of Nigta!
There are crushed and broken spirits—
Crushed when their hopes were bright.
The foll destroyer's missioned,
Again are fond hearts torn,
Again, from the arms of affection,
A cherished one is borne.
There's joy among the angels—
There's music in the spheres—
Another has joined their numbers—
See! a white-robed form appears!
And there, in his saint-like beauty,
He roams, a spirit blest,
"Where the wicked cease from troubling,
And the weary are at rest!"

Wagons, with their "two-forty" nags attached, loadened with household goods, driver cozily seated on top with reins and whip in hand coziny seated on top with reins and winp in nan-ejacciating at the utmost of his voice, "gang-alang," were to be seen and heard rolling along our theroughfares, every half hour in the day. Then, again, the noisy wheel barrow, propelled steadily by some athletic youth, went creaking along the pavement to the great annoyance and discomfiture of the weary pedestrian. And last, along: the pavement to the great annoyance and disconfiture of the weary pedestrian. And last, though not least in our estimation, came another grievaxce,—com-buss-tible matter, which is ready to ignite and kindle to a flame, from the effects of a single spurk—the rosy-checked lass. Heaven preserve us from the ills, the troubles, and the break ups of a "move day."

and the break ups of a "move day."

In Town.—Lucky John Dean, the happy husband of Millionaire Boker's daughter, of New York City, passed through this place in the moraing train of cars, for the West, on Saturday. He is bound with his wife, for Louisville, Kentucky. Dean, is rather a good-looking Paddy, with more intelligence that the great mass of his countrymen, and a gentleman who can with them form. Philadelphia, ease that came with them from Philadelphia, says that his wife seems to "think the world and all of him." Lucky John says he intends working at his trade—carpenter—and his wife will give music lessons.

Exhibition.—We attended an exhibition given in the Court House, on Tuesday evening, by the young ladies of Female School No. 1, by the young ladies of Female School No. 1, under charge of Miss C. T. Benediet. We have rarely seen the Court Room so intensely crowded as on this occasion, and we never saw a better pleased audience. The young ladies acquitted themselves admirably, conferring great credit upon themselves, and their talented teacher. The "Excelsion Band" enlivened the occasion with their excellent music.

EASTER.—The day of eggs, eggs botted, eggs fried, eggs roasted, eggs jumbled, eggs poached, eggs in fricassee, eggs colored and ornamented, is coming. What eggs haveto do with the resurrection of our Saviour we are not able to tell; but it is supposed by some that the custom of the use of eggs at this time, originated with the Russians, who to this day, dye them all manner of colors, and give them as presents to each other.

The Dam.—The contract for building the Newton Hamilton Dam, on this division of the State Canal, has been awarded to Col. Wiley, of Lancaster City, at $13,475? This gentleman is said to be well competent to undertake this important work, and we hope the dam will be substantially built under his charge. When will we get rid of this dam building, nuisance—the public works? -the public works?

THE LAZY CLUB.--This time-honored institution is in a most promising condition. Its members here are rigid observers of the fundamental rule, which is—"Thou shalt not labor." They can be seen daily on the most public corners, and are as lazy, indolent and yag-abondish set of men as can well be found in

Messas Editrons:—

About a year ago my attention was directed to the growing popularity of Worcester's Dictionaries. At first 1 attributed their rapid rise in the public favor to the enterprise and energy of the present publishers, favored by the known predilection of ducationists generally for changing school books, as well as the method of using them. I had long regarded Webster's Dictionary as the standard of accuracy the changed my opinion on that point, or induced me to investigate the claims of any rival the public favored the public the public the public public the public public

Dictionary as their standard, and have voluntarily and strongly recommended it to the public! As nothing short of blind prejudice could reject auch testimony, I procured a copy of Worcester and by a patient and careful comparison with corresponding copies of Webster, Walker and Cobb, for many years used in my school, fully satisfied myself of the superiority of Worcester over any one of the others; and that he combines every thing valuable in all of them, while he avoids some of the inconsistencies of each. His vocabulary is inconsistencies of each. His vocabulary is more extensive, his definition sequally satisfactory, and his orthography more conformed to present, good usage, than either Cobb's or Watker's. His system of notation is equally simple, and more accurate than Webs's, being founded on a complete analysis of the vowel sounds, as every leaves the result of the vowel sounds, as every leaves the principle uses of a Dictionary in the school room is to determine the proper pronunciation of words, a correct system of notation is of much importance. On the subject of Orthography I will not pretend to say that Worcester is always right and Webster wrong when they differ.—None but those who have devoted their lives to the study of our language can be considered competent, in all cases, to decide between them; and probably even suich umpires would, in some cases, differ as widely as the authors we are considering. But it requires no great continued to discover that Worcester's rules and principles of Orthography are more consistent, and less confused and contradictory than Webster's. Of these any including the consistency in the one case and confusion in the others is, I think, very obvious, Worcester, and the subject of orthography, each be fully assumed by the best writers in England and America, and adapted his rules to that usage. Hence his principles and practice are consistent and natural. Whereas Webster has, as we all know, attempted to reform our orthography has obtained in the others is, I think, very obvious, Worcester, and the principles and practice are consistent and natural. Whereas Webster has, as we all know, attempted to reform our orthography has obtained and in the others is, I think, very obvious, Worcester, when the word with its principles and practice are consistent and matural. School. Exhibition.—We had the pleasure of attending, on Friday evening last, the 29th instant, an exhibition of the school under the charge of A. R. Miller at Eden Hill, near Spruce Creek. On account of the length of the programme, the exercises commenced at the early hour of 6½. The room was neatly and tastefully decorated, and was filled to overflowing. The various recitations, declamations, dialogues &c., were delivered in such a manner as to eliminate the state of the control of

The next session of this Institution will open the first Wednesday of May. Peculiar inducements are held out by this Institution, to young men desiring an education. The Board of Instructors is composed of gentlemen of high literary attainments, and skilled in their professions. The location is quiet, secluded and healthy; situated among the mountains it enjoys the pure mountain air. There has never a single case of Ague originated here, and those subject to it would find this a desirable location. The course of instruction is such as is best calculated to prepare young men for business, for teaching, and for taking a high stand in college. A Normal class is formed for those desiring to become teachers, in, which, practical instruction will be given in the art of teaching, hearing recitations, and the proper mode of managing and conducting a school. The course of study in the Commercial Department, is such as to give thorough instruction in Single and Double Entry Bookkeeping, Mercantile Calculations, Pennanships, co.

The time occupied to finish the course, will vary from 3 to 10 weeks, depending on the students diligence. Students can take up this branch of study either in connection with other studies, or devote their whole time to it alone.

Shade Gap is situated on the mail route between Mt. Union Station, on the Penn'a Railroad, and Chambersburg, from which places there is a regular line of Stages.
