The foliage late that clad the trees, Stript by their equinoctial blast, Falls, like the dew-drop on the breeze. Cold winter hastens on, Fair nature feels his grasp: Weeps over all her beauties gone, And sighs their glory past. So life, thy summer soon will end, Thine autumn too will quick decay, And winter come, when thou shalt bend Within the tomb, to mould away. But summer will return, In all her beauties dressed; Nature shall yet rejoice again, And be by man caressed. But, ah! life's summer passed away, Can never, never hope return ; Cold winter comes, with cheerless ray, To beam upon its dreary urn! Then man may daily seek A mansion in the skies, Where summers never cease. And glory never dies! There an eternal Sening shall bloom,

THE WORD OF LIFE.-It is recorded of one good man, who is known to have made uncommor proficiency in his researches after truth, that he studied his bible every day on his knees. And of every good man it must be true, from the nature of the case that he studies the word of God with his eye directed to heaven for divine teaching. Between truth and an humble prayerful spirit there is that indissoluble connexion, that will justify the inference, that where the one is, there we may with great probability look for the other.

With joys as vast as angels' powers;

And thrice ten thousand harps in tune

Shall praise the love that made it ours.

RESPECTFULLY invites those who are troubled with Rheumatic pains, either chronic or inflamatory, to give him a call, having had very good success in curing Rheumatism; and having within the short space of time that he has been here had upwards of forty cases of Rhoumatism under treatment, and having given relief in every case, and failed in but five or six cases of performing a complete cure—and some and others to the long standing of the disease, so that no perfect cure could be expected. He would, therefore, invite those afflicted with Rheumatic pains to give him a call, and satisfy themselves. Not desiring those who are unacquainted with him to rely on his statement, but to come into his know, and satisfy themselves before they employ him-

LITERARY PUBLICATIONS,&c.

THE IRIS.

A Miscellany of Morals, Literature, Science and the Arts.

EDITED BY

Jas. Cooper & Wm. M. Reynolds.

The Press, beyond a doubt, is the grand lever which now moves the intellectual world. Among ivilized nations, public opinion bows so submisively to no other power; even despots reverence ts voice, and demagogues tremble at its frown. Of course, it may be an instrument either of good or of evil—an Ithuriel's spear of truth, or a orcerer's delusive wand. The obstinate defender of exploded doctrines and the wild propagandist of the latest theory alike make this their weapon of attack and defence; and by its means may the friend of truth most successfully refute error and isseminate the pure principles of right reason.

In one of these ways, we may rest assured, it vill be employed; for never can it be fettered or ilenced, and thus will the world continue to read and be ruled by its reasonings. In the present, state of society, books, periodicals, magazines and terms, at the Drug Store of newspapers may be reckoned among the necessaries of life, for which the appetite and demand are becoming alike universal. Is it not, then incalculably important that a proper direction be given to this cords, Inquisitions, Examinations, and other feeling, so that it may be productive of all the benefits which it promises?

We have long believed that the weekly newspaper might assume a character somewhat different from that which it has usually had-that it might be made to come more home to the bosoms and business of men-that its interest might be deepened-its moral tone elevated-its usefulness extended far beyond its present limits. Desirous of contributing somewhat to the fur weekly journal under the above title. THE ILIS will endeavor to keep constantly in view and steadfastly advocate the objects to which it is professedly devoted. Regarding virtue as the surest source of shall endeavor to illustrate its principles and enthem into the hands of "a few." Looking at all useful labor as not only the true foundation of vealth, but also honorable-discoveries and improvements in the arts, agriculture and kindred subjects, will claim a due share of our attention.

Whilst we aim at combining "the useful with the agreeable," we hope to avoid the danger of dulness, on the one hand, and that of pandering to the corrupt taste, on the other.

Studiously abstaining from party politics, we shall think it our duty to discuss important points of policy. We shall also attempt to give an impartial account of domestic as well as of foreign affairs.

With this brief exposition of their views and plans, the Editors throw themselves upon the indulgence of a discriminating public, pledging themselves, if they meet with encouragement, to render the work worthy of patronage.

Gettysburg. NATIONAL ENQUIRER

AND Constitutional Advocate of Universal Liberty. Edited and Published by Benjamin Lundy.

VHIS work has recently been established with the view of advocating the cause of Universal Emancipation. The Editor, having devoted more than eighteen years of his life to this important subject, therance of such an object, we propose publishing and having,' nearly the whole of this period, superintended the editorial department of another publication of similar character and views, conceives it to be unnecessary at present, to give an exposition of his particular individual happiness and national prosperity, we sentiments in relation to it. Yet it may not be in:proper to state explicitly, that the prinforce its precepts. Laboring for "the many," we cipal aim and leading object of the work shall offer to the people the Key of knowledge, will be THE IMMEDIATE AND TOTAL ABOLIthat they may thus keep in their own hands that TION OF SLAVERY IN AMERICA, by the most nower which will otherwise ere long glide from efficient moral, judicious and Constitutional means. The time was-and well indeed is it remembered—when but a solitary voice (except its own occasional echo) was heard throughout the land, in favor of a restoration of the "inalienable rights," and redress for the innumerable wrongs, of the American bondman. It was a dreary night of hopeless, soul-depressing toil and care! But within the period above mentioned, a marked and visible change has been effected; a wonderful impetus has been given to the progress of the holy cause; and the brightest cheering rays of hope and confidence in success, are bearing around us. It is true that much yet remains to be done, in orderito guard against and ward off the awful, impending calamity, which has long threatened the peace and safety of our country. A severe contest is yet to be waged with the demon of oppression, ere the vengeful arm of Justice shall be stayed, and the power of moral truth established, and the renovation of our social system effected. We must, therefore, buckle on the armor of righteous persevering energy-renew our zeal and activity in the vineyord of labor-plead with more earnestness the cause of the suffering and the enslaved—engage with more fervor n supplication, at the Throne of Almighty Power, for the successful termination of our arduous, yet glorious undertaking. Wit such views as are here expressed, the editor of this work has assumed the station which he now occupies. He long since entered with alacrity this great arena of noral warfare, and yields to none, un the disposition to sustain the principles which he as for many years reduced, practice.

"In [Slavery's] field advancing his firm foot, He plants it on the line that Justice draws, And will prevail or perish in her came." The co-operation of all who are friendly o the object of the work is desired, and their patronage is generally solicited. Every exertion will be made to render it instructive and entertaining, while the appropriate motto will be ever recollected-"Fiat Justitia Ruat Cælum." Terms of Publication.-The National Enquirer is published every Saturday, at No. 223 Arch Street, Philadelphia. The price of subscription is Two DOLLARS TER INNUM, payable half yearly, in advance.

Twenty six Numbers will constitute a Volume. Any person who will procure subscriptions, and forward the money for the same, as aforesaid, will be entitled to six copies of a volume complete, for every Five Dollars advanced. The Advocates of Emancipation, generally, are requested to use heir influence, and lend their assistance in obtaining patronage, and in circulating the Letters and communications must be forwarded to the editor, free of expense, or they will not be attended to. This regulation is absolutely necessary, to prevent imposition rom the opponents of our cause.
