"I WISH NO OTHER HERALD, NO OTHER SPEAKER OF MY LIVING ACTIONS, TO KEEP MINE HONOR FROM CORRUPTION."-BHARS.

BY ROBERT WHITE MIDDLETON.

GETTYSBURGH, PA. FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 34, 1887.

orphans.

the family.

for the making of fringe.

riches unknown to any one.

from which he only came down at meals; and consecrated all his time to labor. All in the house believed it was necessary for him to do so, and which gave him an opportunity of increasing his

However, all saw a change in him ! the old patched coat was replaced by a blue cloth one, his crush-

IVOL. 8--NO. 34.

Contraction and the contraction of the state of the

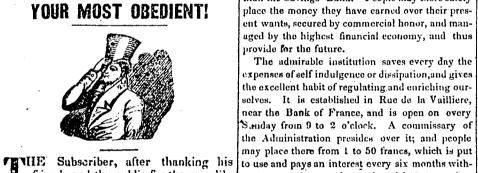

The Fashionable Hats, Caps and Bonnets.

Wm. W. Paxton. AS now on hand a very large assort HATS. CAPS & BONNETS at his old stand in Chambersburg Street, two doors from the Court House. CONSISTING AS FOLLOWS Men's Custor HATS, Roram do.  Spanish body do. Silk do. Plain Russia do.  Youth's Fur do. Old Men's Broad Brims do. Low Crown do. Also Second hand HATS. Ladies FUR BONNETS,

SILK do. Also-A GOOD ASSORTMENT OF

FUR CAPS, of different kinds: HAIR SEAL CAPS for MEN and BOYS.

All of which he will sell at Low Prices wholesale and retail-for Cash and Country Produce-such as Wheat, Corn, Rye, Buckwheat, Oats, Wood, Wool, &c. &c. Call and judge for yourselves. November 17, 1837. tf-33

THE CABLAND. -"With sweetest flowers enrich'd, From various gardens cull'd with card." FOR THE GETTYSBURGH STAR AND BANNER.

PARAPHRASE

Of an extract from remarks made by TANDDED STEVENS, Esq. in the Constitutional Convention, on the 8th of July, 1837,

BY MRS. LYDIA JANE, PEIRSON. Yes! rather would I be a soul-crush'd slave, Beneath a Southern master's iron sway; Who looks for no redemution but the grave, And sows with blood, and tears, his weary way Who grovels crush'd to earth by scorn and toil,

On whom hope never beams, joys never smile!

Ah! rather this degraded slave I'd be Than the free subject of a Northern State, Who basely fears to your his soul cut free Among'st his country's children in debate! I will speak boldly! Let the Coward fear, I'll sooner die! than feel the tyraut here!

Oh! that I own'd the whole degraded land That lies a blot upon my country's name ; That I might break the chains from every hand, And FREEDOM! to their startled ears proclaim Then should I witness a soul-thrilling sight: Their first glad dance of Freedom's wild delight!

How glow'd that noble Speaker's generous breast, With the high ardour of the free and brave! While the clear voice so dauntlessly exprest This holy wish of mercy for the Slave! O! let this voice of rich Philanthropy Re-echo through our land, from sea to sca! LIBERTY, Tioga County, Pa.

THE BEPOSEDEN.

The Saving's Bank. "The Spirit of the Age is Benevolence." Every day in France, new, useful and ingenious establishments arise. Some are occupied in ncreasing the power and perfection of manufactories, others turn their attention to agriculture and the arts. All the energies of man seemed to be called forth to increase the progress of civilization and human happiness; but nothing contributes more to the comfort and improvement of the laboring classes than the Savings' Bank. People may there safely place the money they have earned over their pres-

out any expense to those who wish to save thus ent wants, secured by commercial honor, and managed by the highest financial economy, and thus provide for the future. The admirable institution saves every day the expenses of self indulgence or dissipation, and gives the excellent habit of regulating and enriching ourselves. It is established in Rue de la Vailliere, near the Bank of France, and is open on every Sunday from 9 to 2 o'clock. A commissary of the Administration presides over it; and people may place there from 1 to 50 francs, which is put soul, and would not put himself in the way to re- left his garret, and took decent apartments in the ceive the least neglect; he never asked any thing same house with his sister. It was a great distance of any one, and comforted himself in his obscuri'y from the one in which he had worked during 21 by not being obliged to require any thing from the society he shunned. He never went to the house of his sister except on her birthday. On the morning of that day he took a two-penny boquet of flowers, entered the back door, kissed Madame Duhamel and her two daughters, the eldest of whom was his god-daughter, then left the house, and never went | daughters were soon enabled to open a work room again through the year. The mother and her daughters sometimes visited him in his garret, but they always forewarned him of their coming or they would have found the door shut. Madame principally one who level in the Rue aux Fers, and Duhamel remarked that he shaved himself for these meetings, and always had on clean linen. On these occasions the ties of blood regained their empire, and they were received with the greatest affection. But he never made the least gift, not even to his god-daughter, or the offer of the smallest refreshment; he had always something to say about economy, and kept up his austerity of manner. Ten years passed away, during which Laurent went regularly every Sunday to place his money in the Savings' Bank. The two books, of the existence of which no one in his family had the least suspicion, showed a capital which had increased by its own interest. The imaginations of people were to him of little importance, he even rejoiced in secret ed lenther cap by a round hat, his cotton velvet at them; while his riches increased every year, he pantaloons by woolen or nankeen; and his shoes only redoubled his parsimony. In the meantime, the prodigal jeweller saw his fortune diminish eve- had yielded insensibly to the desire of pleasing his ry day, more by foolish expenses than by losses sister and her daughters, from whose society he exwhich every one experiences in business. He in- perienced those heartfelt ties which are only to be sensibly lost his credit, and to re-establish, he found in united families. Flora and Leila were bought and sold in the stocks, which soon compleed his roin. He was obliged to leave his brilliant shop in the Palais Royal, sell his stock of silver and a beautied with her jewels, and could no longer retain the to an uncommon state of perfection. The purity masters who had instructed her daughters on the of their morals, and the dignity which they retainharp, and in the song and the dance. They retired of young persons who had been well brought ed to the fourth story of a house; and Madame up, contributed to attract the public esteem. The Duhamel bring without a domestic, employed her- rich fringe merchant, who came frequently to visit male his last resolution ere he bid the old man self in the hardest of the work; Flora and Leila them, was charmed by the union which subsisted took care of the lightest part; while the father, to between the two sisters, and the respectful attenprovide for their subsistence, was obliged to solicit work of those whose equal he had once been, by which he suffered great humiliation. soon became so intimate as to confide to each other

Laurent, who had foreseen this catastrophe, appeared neither surprised nor afflicted by it; indeed some persons thought he enjoyed a secret pleasure ed to retire from bu iness, and having no children, at the fall of his brother-in-law. The latter now made an offer for Madam Duhamel to purchase entirely changed his manner towards Laurent; he his establishment and succeed him in business, if did not blush, as formerly, at seeing him ; he did | she could give him sufficient security for the paynot any more criticise his patched over-coat, his ment. leather cap, his pantaloons of cotton velvet, or his "Your proposition is flattering, and does us honor, large shoes, made stronger by iron nails ; it was but only living by the work of our hands, we have now,my good brother here, my dear Laurent there. not been able to lay up any thing, so that we have He went to see him every Sunday, praised his donot anything to offer you but our industry and mestic habits.congratulated him on having so little honor.'

to do in the world, and even admired his economy, "If our father," added Leila, "had not had those but all did not produce any result. Laurent reunfortunate losses which ruined him, we might maining without the least expression of concern accept your offer, which fulfils all our wishes, but eral encouragement he has heretofore re- their surplus money. It is managed by persons in his countenance, and with perfect coldness of we cannot dream of it," said she, heaving a sigh, ceived, begs leave to inform them, that he employed in the Bank of France, who under the manner, did not make the least offer of assistance, "we must be contented to remain workwomen." "How much do you value your establishing and with his eyes fixed on the graver, he continu-

The humble engraver, notwithstailding his poor | ra and Leila felt a great affection for their uncle, | correspondents. He reserved for himself an an- | ly we must confess that there is a God who appearance, had all the pride of an independent and paid him every respectful attention. Laurent nuity, which gave him an honest and independent all the enjoyments of a good father of a family .---And when he saw at the counter his two nieces, years; but it suited his years to work by the piece, and it also enabled him better to fulfil the duties ing, every day increasing their fortune and credit, he had assumed, that of replacing the father of the

has produced."

Republican Banner

This re-union made the happiness of all who his wishes was accomplished. The Misses Du- tormented. Does he not wish to give us a forecomposed it; and Madame Duhamel and her two hamel accepted the addresses of the sons of a rich | taste of heaven, when he blesses us so abundantly silk merchant in the Rue St. Dennis. The two here on earth? And yet multitudes will curse sisters received the nuptial benediction the same their Muker, and call to him to damn their souls, They had gained by their skill and industry the day. This double marriage, in blending the two and the souls of their fellow men ! After all that patronage of the first merchants in the city, and fortunes, gave satisfaction to all; and the good old the Lord has done for us in this world to make us uncle, who invisted upon making their trousseau, happy, they still hate him and are not willing to conducted himself a large business. He took a led the brides to the ultar, which was surrounded great interest in the family of Duhamel, and gave by their friends; and when the oaths of fidelity hem his most important orders. Laurent on his were pronounced by both parties, the happy old part being occupied with his graver, improved all man, in regarding them tenderly could not hinder his time, but hid his gain as much as possible from from escaping his lips, these words, accompanied that are laid up in heaven, if they will only comby a smile, "See! see! what the Savings' Bank He occupied two small rooms in the four h story,

Mard of Rearing. A LOVE STORY.

A young Jonathan once courted the daughter of an old man that lived "down cast," who professed to be deficient in hearing, but, for south, who was more captious than limited in hearing, as the seauch will show.

It was a stormy night in the ides of March, if I mistake not, when lightning met lightning, and although not very thin, were without nails. He loud peals of thunder answered thunder, that Jonathan sat by the old man's fireside discussing with the old lady (his intended mother-in-law) on the expediency of asking the old man's permission to holds his God, his Saviour, and all those holy bemarry "Sal." Jonathan resolved to "pop it" to now twenty years of age; they carried upon their fuces the expression of intellect, which reflected the old man the next day: "but," said he, "as I think on the task my heart shrinks." To be brief, the traces of an early good education. Their business increased every day, their work being distinnight passed, and by the dawn of another day the ful collection of paintings. Madame Duhamel part- guished by a taste which enabled them to bring it old man was found in his barnlot feeding pigs,---Jonathan rose from bed early in the morning, spied the old man feeding his pigs, and resolved to ask him for Sal.

Scarce had a minute elapsed after Jonathan "good morning." Now Jonathan's heart beat.now he scratched his head, and ever and anon gave birth tion with which they treated the mother and old to a pensive yawn. Jonathan then declared that uncle. He found a relaxation from the cares of he'd as lief take thirty-nine "stripes" as to ask the business at their house in the evening, and they old man, "but," said he aloud to himself, "however, here goes it, a faint heart never won a fair their hopes and prospects. The old merchant wish- gal,'" and addressed the old man thus:

"I say,old man,I want to marry your daughter." Old man-"You want to borrow my halter, would loan it to you, Jonathan, but my son has taken it, and gone off to the mill."

Jonathan (putting his mouth close to the old man's ear and speaking in a deafening voice)-"I've got five hundred pounds of money." Old man (stepping back as if greatly alarmed and exclaiming in a voice of surprise)-"You have got five hundred pounds of honey! What in the mischief can you do with so much honey, Jonathan? Why, it is more than all the neighborhood has use for."

Jonathan (not yet the victim of despair, and putting his mouth to the old man's car, bawled out) -"I've got gold." "But why so slow to say it!" inquired he. Old man-"So have I, Jonathan, and it's the She answered, "I was too happy to speak, until worst cold I ever had in my life." So saying, he heard and felt thy pain." sneezed a "wash up."

created us so; and for that purpose-even that we living; and he experienced, although a bachelor, should partake of the many blessings which he had bestowed upon us; he is trying to show us by the many blessings which he confers upon us, that he more charming than ever, always modest and retir- loves us, and that it is his holy pleasure that we should not be like the dumb brutes who lie down he would repeat with delight "See what the Sav- and die and are no more, but that he has given ut ings' Bank lias produced." At last the dearest of a soul, which after death must be forever happy or enjoy his blessings with contented and grateful hearts; they are determined to persevere in their sins-yes, after he has sent his ministers unto them, to tell them of the glory and the treasures ply his commands; and on the other hand, to warn them of the danger and approaching destruction ... which await them, should they not make their peace with God ; and he alone can feel that the Lord has been kind to him, even from the day of his birth.

It is the Christian that enjoys the foretaste of Heaven while here on earth, and sometimes wishes to leave his tabernacle of clay, and vise and mingle with the angelic host above, to join a dear father, or mother, or brother, or sister, or wife, or husband, or son, or Jaughter, who have goue before, and washed their robes in the blood of the Lambl Ah! when the Christian, through the eye of faith takes a glance into that blessed institution, and beings who have been faithful amidst all the troubles and trials of this wicked world, even those he loved in this world, perhaps his best friends, who have gone before him, he is almost constrained to think that he has left this vale of tears and sorrow-he is so delighted with the scene that it leaves an impression on his mind for many days, and no doubt sometimes to the end of his daysthen will he exclaim with the poet:

"O glorious hour, O blest abode, I shall be near and like my God."

But alas! when he awakes, as it were, from his dream, he finds himself yet in the midst of a wicked world. to await his Master's will. But contented, he is resigned to the will of God, in preparing himself better, and endeavoring to persuade his felow mortals to make their peace with God.

But here I must stop, seeing that my sheet is full, but not without a word to the impenitent :--"Stop, Sinner, and reflect what you are doing, and where you are going!" (D)

THE LANGUAGE OF LOVE .--- "Dost thou love me?" esked the youth, in the holiest hour of love, the first, in which souls meet and give themselves. away. The maiden gazed on him, but answered not. "Oh! if thou lovest me, speak!" continued. he; but she guzed on him still, and could not .---"Then I have but dreamed of happiness, and hoped that thou didst love me; but now all is over-both happiness and hope!" said the youth.

"Dearest, do I not, then, love thee?" the maiden now asked, once and again.

branches, at his old stand in South Baltimore fortune, receive the numerous deposites that are Street, and will keep constantly on hand a continues the business, in all its various surveillance of a person distinguished by rank and friends and the public for the very lib-

11-33

HE HAS FOR SALE, Black and White plain Russia HATS, Latest Fashions! Gentlemen's Beaver, Castor and Roram do. Youths', Boys' and Children's do. SILK HATS, Black and White, for MEN and BOYS.

LADIES' BEAVER BONNETS, vorv neat and Fashionable.

Good Wool HATS.

Also-Otter, Nutria, Musk, Chinchilla and HATTR SEAL CAPS, a gen eral assortment. All which will be sold on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail. SAMUEL S. MCCREARY.

November. 17, 1837.

COACH BACB, FRINGE AND TASSELS.

OF HIS OWN MANUFACTURE, which he will dispose of on the most reason able terms.

Orders from a distance will be promptly attended to. Any Pattern made to order. Address

JOHN ODELL, Gettysburg, Pa. N. B. All kinds of MILITARY work done to order. November 17, 1937. tf - 33

Information Wanted.

ON the 1st day of May, 1836, a young man, (Son of the Subscriber,) named William Baldwin, left his home, at Cumberland Furnace, Cumberland counpassion." ty, Pu. on a short journey, and has not been Laurent had a sister, the wife of a man named heard of since. Fears are entertained that some accident may have happened to him. If he bestill living, any information respecting him, communicated to the Editor of the "Seutinel," Gettysburg, or to his distressed mother, at Cumberland Furnace, will be most gratefully received JANE BALDWIN. November 3, 1887.

ed to work, without either blaming or consoling nade by all classes. his brother-in-law, who left him, firm in the belief Nothing can be more interesting to the philanthat it was not in his power to assist them. Notbropist than this sight; artizans and workmen who withstanding the indifference of Laurent towards oring not only that which has been saved by self- | Duhamel, he was less rigid when he saw his sister lenial, but sometimes that which has been taken and her two daughters. When they visited him from their wants. There you may see an old porin his garret, which did not appear so high as forter, increasing every month his little treasure, which merly, when they told him of their troubles and shall save him, when he is old and infirm, from the vain efforts of Duhamel to get a living, and going into a hospital. Here you may see a young made at last the painful confession of having sacrificed every thing to preserve their honor, and woman bringing her earnings, that she may have omething towards housekeeping. On this side is there was now not anything left, and that they were rich old man, who wishes to increase the prosreduced to labor with their hands, he was trouwrity of the useful establishment by a sum that bled in spite of himself, and his face showed the shall cause his name to be remembered and blesscombat of his heart. One day, near the end of ed. On the other a poor Savoyard, who takes Autumn, Flora and Leila, who had, not long ago, from his purse, the grains of his best day, as an worn the most elegant clothing, were now so badly clad that their uncle remarked it; these poor offering to his old mother. Among them a fashionable young man is sometimes seen, with the girls confessed that this was all they had to prewinnings of the evening before, which he brings serve them against the severity of winter. as the fruit of his resolution to break the direful "It must not;be," cried he, with an expression of passion of gaming. This multitude of people, prefeeling they did not know he had. "No, no! this senting in one hand their money, and with the ought not to be; I cannot suffer my niece, my goddaughter, to perish with the cold; no, if I sell the other a small book, in which are inscribed the sums placed in the bank, appears like a swarm of induslittle I own.'

trious bees, who come to their hive loaded with the A few days after, the sisters, each one, received a fruit of their labors, and murmuring with the pleapresent of a cloth cloak and merino dress : they sure of success. Among the persons who rarely were not of the first quality, but they would make failed to bring something every Sunday, to add to them comfortable during the severity of the seaa capital already formed, a man named Laurent son. This first gift that Laurent had ever made, was noticed. He was an engraver of metals; his caused a great surprise and a gratitude, the ac. face carried an expression of mischief; but it was knowledgment of which went to the bottom of his at the same time intellectual; his person and clothes heart, and made him acquainted with the inexpressiindicated either extreme poverty or avarice. He ble luxury of doing good. He renewed his gifts carried two small books, in which was regularly with all possible economy, leaving them in the bentered the sum he brought; sometimes it was lief that they were at the expense of his own wants small, at others large; and which he placed in the and privations. He took less that week to the Sa-

bank with an carnestness and avidity that denoted | vings' Bank ; but how could he see his sister and an ardent desire for accumulation. As the crowd his two charming nicces exposed during the winwas always great, and as it was necessary to go at | ter to the horrors of want! They, on their part, an early hour to save time, he always carried his were touched by the sympathy of their uncle; and breakfast in his pocket; it generally consisted of a convinced that what he had given them was the small rye loaf, moistened with barley water; 3 sous fruit of his labor, they redoubled all their efforts were sufficient to procure it. He ordinarily dined not to abuse his goodness. The mother, who had at 11 o'clock, at a cheap restaurant's who lived beworked at the making of fringe before her marlow him in the same building. We may believe ringe, now resumed her old business; and her two that his personal goods were analagous to his life. daughters joined with so much success, that they en, and took, every morning a glass of wine. capital. They worked from morning till night, and People were the more astonished at his parsieach one was soon able to gain forty sous a day.

mony, because he was an excellent workman and which would enable them to support themselves. added skill and quickness te industry and talent. Duhamel, on his part, carned a little by working sides what he gained at home. Every one had and the severo conflicts of his pride, weakened him strength and increased my courage. At last I have something to say about his manner of living .- | and effected his health. He was attacked by an Sometimes he was suspected of gaming, or ventur- illness that soon carried him to his grave, regreting in lotteries. Sometimes he was accused of ting but too late that he had yielded so easily to orably placed in society, holding the rank of merwaiting upon ladies. This imputation made him the attraction of vanity, and shuddering to think chants in the city.

smile, and only amused him; naturally caustic, it of what might be the fate of his family, to whom "I have achieved my work peaceably near you pleased him that under his costume they should there was left, besides their own efforts, only the and shall be able to say in seeing your business suspect him of having any portion of "the tender | feeble support of his brother-in-law, who, he was prosper, my nicces happily settled in society and convinced, could not aid them by his purse. their excellent mother surrounded by their children

Laurent, who was still refrained from appearing -- "See what the Savings' Bank has produced "" Duhamel, who was a jeweller in the Palais Royal, to take any interest, was delighted with the indus- All the wishes of the good old uncle were realized; and who was as brilliant and extravegant as his try and perseverance of Duhamel. Under the the treaty was concluded the same day with the brother in-law was rough and grasping. Madame | pretence of uniting them more strongly. he pro- | fringe merchant, who found, in a family so united, Duhamel had tried every means to attract the com- posed to put in a common stock, the produce of the best guarantee of the money which remained panion of her childhood and first friend to her their labor, and to bear himself a third part of the due, and which was punctually paid. The Magahouse, for Laurent was several years older than his expenses of housekeeping. They gladly accepted sin do la Rue aux Fers prospered more than ever.

at?" asked Laurent, sitting, until now, unconcerned at the table, and amusing himself with dominos. "It is," answered the merchant, "worth at least 100,000 france, but if I could receive the half, the remainder might remain on security." "If 50,000 francs will satisfy you," answered Laurent with emotion, "my nieces may treat with you." "You are dreaming my brother? cried Madam Duhamel.

"Our uncle wishes to amuse himself at our ex gone." ense," added Flora.

"He wishes to tease us by building castles in the ir," said Leila."

"My children, I am serious," said Laurent, with out raising his eyes, and continuing to amuse himself at the table, "each of you possess more than 25,000 francs."

"What do you say, dear uncle?" "Yes, I have examined your books at the Say ngs' Bank-"

"We do not comprehend you." He arose at these words, and looking at his nieces vith a smile, he went hastily to his room, from whence he brought an old portfolio containing two small books-one hearing the name of Flora Duhamel, and the other that of Leila; each one containing twenty-five thousand francs. The two young persons to whom he gave them, could not believe their eyes. Madame Duhamel after she was convinced of the reality of this, threw hersolf into the arms of her brother, and said to him with

"That mystery which we could not comprehend s now explained. This is the fruit of so many years of privation and severe economy."

"It is true, dear sister, seeing that your husband would ruin himself by his luxury and foolish expensos, I thought it my duty to prepare for the future. Of the seven or eight francs which I daily earned, I determined to spend only two, it is now seventeen years since I have placed what I have been able to save in the Savings' Bank. I have acquired by adding the interest to the capital 50,ing to my nieces, and which will let them see how much a calculating and persevering economy will

However, he always had a good hed and clean lin- were patronized by the richest merchants in the produce. You will pardon me for all the mortifications I have made you suffer by my mean appearance, by that parsimony I have used to obtain my wishes. I have suffered on account of it myself more than once, but the idea of saving my sis-He would can six and seven frances a day, be- for jewellers; but the mortifications ho suffered, ter and her children from misery re-animated my > come, but not without effort, to the term of my privation and my happiness. I shall see you hon-

than that there is a God.

Now for a moment let us look to ourselves, and see why we were endowed with so much more insister; but he was inflexible in his resolutions and his offer, for Madame Duhamel had always pre- Laurent gave up engraving, which had become demns us when we do that which is wrong? Even friend can tell us to what class of fishes these unchangeable in his habits, and did not wish that served for her brother a tender attachment; not- painful on account of his weakened eyes, kept the the infidel, when in aanger of losing his life, shows piscatory specimens belong, we will yield 91-31 the proud Duhamel should suffer by his presence. withstanding his indifference and parsimony. Flo- books of the establishment, and made one of the an uneasiness and is not willing to die. Certain- him the pallen of lehithy clogy.

By this time the old lady came up, and having observed Jonathan's unfortunate luck, she put her mouth to the old man's ear, and screamed like a wounded Vahoo:---

"Daddy, I say, daddy, you don't understandhe wonts to marry our daughter."

Old man---- I told him that our calf halter was Old lady ---- Why, doudy, you can't understand;

he's got gold! he's rich!" Old man-"He's got a cold and the itch, ch ! What's he doing here with the itch, ch?" So saying the old man aimed a blow at Jonathan's head with his walking cane; but, happily for Jonathan, he dodged it. Nor did the rage of the old man stop at this, but with angry countenance he made after Jonathan, who took to his heels, nor did Jonathan's luck stop here; he had not got out of the barnyard, nor far from the old man, who run him a close race, ere Jonathan stumped his toe and fell to the ground, and, before the old man could "take up," he stumbled over Jonathan, and fell sprawling in a mudhole. Jonathan sprung to his heels, and with the speed of John Gilpin cleared himself .---And poor Sal! she died a nun. Never had no husband.

Who can be an Atheist?

WHEN we look around and behold how beautiful and how excellent, and how adapted to our wants, every thing has been created, must we not admit that there must be an infinitely wise and good being, who is the author thereof ? Can we

for a moment imagine that all these things came by chance? No, we must at once believe that there is a God, who has created and still preserves them by the word of his almighty power. Let us cast our eyes around us, and behold the heauty of the harvest field, ripe for the sickle, which but three months before appeared as though it would not produce the seed that was sown on it, but at last

000 france, which I have now the pleasure of offer- it brought forth a full crop. Who must not admit that the increase comes from God? If we cast our eye on the corn-field, and see how the corn springs up from day to day; the farmor, it is true, planted, ploughed and hoed the same, but would not all have been in vain had not God added his blessing? If we look about us and behold the domestic ani > to our use, must we not confess that there is a wise and good God?

Now let us for a moment cast our eyes toward the heavens and behold the sun, the moon, and the stars, and all those planets which revolve round the sun, the centre; and could our eyes penetrate through the celestial world, methinks we could see thousands of worlds now invisible-and have these all come by chance? No! it cannot be otherwise tellect than any thing else that we see around us; more than one in circumference, perfective why is it that we are formed so much superior to white, without scales, slightly resembling a all other species of the animal creation; why is it eat fish shape, and not only destitute of eyes, that we so often feel an uncasiness in our breast; but of every thing bearing the slightest why is it that we have a conscience which con- resemblance to the visual organ. If some

LIFE .--- A man may change his life into a desort, wherein his eye will rest on nothing but the infinity of carthly littlenesses and of heavenly grandeur. But is not such an Arabian desert, which containsnothing but the transition from countless grains of sand by day, to countless stars by night, inferiour in beauty and fruitfulness to a laudscape. wherein are some shadows thrown by trees and clouds?

TIME-Time is a ceaseless dropping away of ioments, which fall and disappear; while the future hangs unchanged on high, and the past is ever growing below, and increases the more, the farther it recedes. What, then, remains to us? I answer, the present: fast as time may fly by, the present is our eternity, and never deserts us.

THE VEIL OF THE FUTURE .- Thou standest before the mighty veil which shrouds eternity, and askest. Is it a veil of mourning or that of Isis? that of a murderer or a beauty? that of a radiant visage; like Moses's, or of a corpsel I answer, Thou wilt. me day lift it, and such as thy heart has deserved. such wilt thou lift.

POETRY .--- Tell us, thou bee, why makest thou hy wax, for masks or for candles-for concealment or enlightenment? The bee answered, "For neither; only for cells to hold my honey." Ask the poet. "Just like me," rejoined the poet; "I seek. neither to deceive nor to undecoive; but to give sweetness."

RULERS AND PEOPLE .- Both arise from a common source, as the root and top of a plant spring. from the same point in the seed: and though one. grows downward and the other upward, both are nourished from the same material; and when separated, both die-but the top first.

or asleep," says the heart of man, when his dim eye can no longer follow his footsteps. Thus didmen once dream that the sun had sunk to sleep in the ocean, when he was waking and moving over a new world.

MAN .--- Momus looked on the animal creation. and said, thoughtfully, "Every beast resembles some one god or goddess; but which is the image of them all?" Then Prometheus formed man, and answered, "Behold him!", SUBTERRANEOUS FISHES!-We saw on Saturday, what seemed a great curiosity. Several living fishes were shown to us, said to have been taken from a spring about three fourths of a mile under the earth, in a cave near Lost River, Indiana, The fishes wore about two inches in length, and a little mals of every description, how they are adapted