so blended with discussions in interature or in moral able. Application to be made to in science, otherwise anobjectionable, as to gain admittance for the sake of the more valuable matter to which they adhere: but whenever that happens, they are incidental only, not primary. They are dross, tolerated only because it cannot be severed from the sterling ore wherewith it is incorporated.

Reviews and Carrical Notices occupy their due space in the work: and it is the Editor's aim that they should have a threefold tendency—to convey in condenied form, such valuable truths or interesting inci-dents as are embodied in the works reviewed—to di-rect the reader's attention to books that deserve to be read & to warn him against wasting time & money upon that large number which merit only to be bur nud. In this age, of publications that by their variety and multitude distract and overwhelm every indiby the views just mentioned, is one of the most ines-timable and indispensable of auxiliaries to him who does wish to discriminate.

Essays and Tales, having in view utility or amusement, or both—Historical Sketches and Resing-Schnors of events too minute for History, yet eluci-dating it, and heightening its interest—may be regar-ded as forming the staple of the work. And of indigenous Porties, enough is published—somotimes of no mean strain—to manifest and cultivate the growing poetical tast and talents of our country.

The times appear, for several reasons, to demand such a work—and not one alone, but many. The published is feverish and irritated still, from recent political resident The poly assessing influence of Literalis mind is feverish and irritated still, from recent po-litical strifes: The soft, assuasive influence of Litera-ture is needed, to allay that fever, and sooth that irri-tation. Vice and folly are rioting abroad: They should be driven by indignant rebuke, or lashed by ri-dicule, into their litting haunts. Ignorance lords it o-yer an immense proportion of our people: Every spring should be set in motion, to arouse the enligh-tened and to increase their number; so that the great enemy of popular government may no longer broad be defined and to increase their number; so that the great tree desired and to increase their number; so that the great tree desired is a portent tree of popular government may no longer brood like a portent ous cloud; over the destinics of our country. And to accomplish all these ends, what more powerful agent can be employed than a periodical, on the plan of the Mossenger, it that plan be but carried for sale the residue half at the same time out in practice?

The Sourze peculiarly requires such an agent. In all the Union, south of Washington, there are but two Literary periodicals! Northward of that city, there are probably at least twenty-five or thirty! Is this contrast justified by the wealth, the leisure, the native talent, or the actual literary taste of the Southern with those of the North? No: for tive talent, or the actual literary taste of the Southern people, compared with those of the North? No: for in wealth, talents and taste, we may justly claim at least an equality with our brethren; and a domestic institution exclusively our own, be oud all doubt affords us; if we choose, twice the leisure for reading and writing which they enjoy.

It was from a deep sense of this local want that the word Southers was engrafted on this periodical; and not with any design to nourish local prejudices, or to advocate supposed local interests. Farfrom any such thought; it is the Editor's fervent wish to see the North and South bound endearingly together forever in the silken bands of mutual kindness and affection. So far from meditating hostility to the North, he has already drawn, and he hopes hereafter to draw much of his choicest matter thence; and happy indeed will he deem himself, should his pages, by making each region know the other better, contribute in any essential degree to dispel the lowering clouds that now threaten the peace of both, and to brighten and strengthen the sacred ties of fraternal love.
