Sparkling wit, and ros'y mirth, Boon companions, we, on earth; Jest for jest, and laugh for laugh, Fancy free, wo'll sing and quaff! Prodent mortal look awry, Choose your path and so will I; Art thou better than another? Better be, and hence good brother.

Gorgeous, glorious, gushing wine-

Pour, ye heav'ns, a flood divine !

I've nor title, station, gold, Yet a stream of wealth untold Cheers my heart, and lights my brain, As I quaff and fill again! Fill! and share with me the charm; Fill! and frowning fate disarm; Care would kill us-care we'll kill, Merry midnight! fill, and fill!

SONG FOR MORNING. Give to me, oh! give to me-Make it strong-a bowl of tea! Never, thing of cursed clay, Will this headach pass away! Dust I am-a pretty dust-Bring the tea! endure I must, Hyson-strong-and do be quick, Head and nerves-I'm very sick.

Revelry! thou haggard fright, Hid in roses thro' the night: Ugly witch: that apeing joy, Mask'd in smiles, doth smiles destroy, Hence! the spells forever flying, Groaning, and repenting lying, Prudently I swear to tread--If I e'er get out of bed!

I've nor title, gold, nor station--In a church mouse situation; Then, a pretty state of mind To attempt to raise the wind. What a cursed—cursed state! What an aching-aching pate! Here's the ten!-quick, quick with some, Miserable morning's come!

laren Bulls .- An Irish peasant found a friend of his one night lying speechless on "Paddy, come here; sure here's Mike Mur-Murphy dead!" said the other. "Oh both- countryeration to ye, I'll engage he's not dead; sure didn't he sould his pig this morning?" On going to him and finding him dead drunk, he exclaimed, "By St. Patrick, I wish I had only one half his disease."

THE STRONG MAN .- "My son, hold up your head and tell me who was the strongest man?" "Jonah." "Why so?" "Cause got him down." "That's a man, you can take your seat."

anner in which one Bra-I am accountable for it!'

We once knew a damsel who was so exgreen spectacles, because she objected to other country. looking at gentlemen with her naked eye.

THROWING OVER A BUOY .-- A captain at sea once ordered an Irishman, a green hand, to throw over the buoy. The captain then went below, but coming on deck soon after, asked the other if he had thrown over the buoy; he replied, 'I could not catch the boy, so I throwed over the ould cook!" It was well that he was a good swimmer, for he was almost drowned when dragged on board.

A great many anecdotes are related of personal bravery. We should like to see that man who would deliberately allow a woman to catch him making mouths at her child.

Here is a sample of female simplicity: "I wonder what my brother John sees in the lasses that he likes them sae well; for my part, I wad nae gie the companie of ae laddie for twenty lasses."

CITY HABITS .- A gentleman from Bos ton, on a visit to his friend in the country, speaking of the times, observed that his wife had lately expended fifty dollars for a habit. His friend replied. "Here in the country we don't allow our wives to get into such hubits."

An Irishman of our acquaintance lately looked under the head of "Obituary" in newspaper for the list of dead letters.

A very sensible married lady begs us to drop this significant hint to the young ladies. She says she has been married tiwice, and each time had a numerous train of suitors, and yet she never wore --- corsets.

We have come to the conclusion that if a child finds it can make any thing by yelling, it is pretty generally at it.

Dr. John Loffland, the "Milford Bard," is now in the Baltimore Almshouse. How For Lady's Book one year and Thier's often is ganius of the highest order subjected to a debased bondage by the mere aniinal propensities of poor human nature.-Intemperance is said to be the besetting on of the Bard, with whiskey inspired.

A WARNING .- A little girl in New York, was thrown into severe convulsions, predeced by hight, on being shut up in a dark room as punishment. The attending physician at one time entertained doubts of the recovery of the child. The child is happily restored.
