The following verses are published at the solicitation of the writer;

SCENERY AT SEA. One sullen plunge, and the scelle is o'er, And the sea roll'd on as it roll'd before. Who ever gazed upon them shining, And turned to earth without repining?

When the moon refrains to give her light, The sea is dazaling to our sight, Then the bold waves throws their brillimt curls In vivid colors around them furls.

Yon may turn your head which way you will, The eye rests on numerous fires still, Seeming as altars of incense ascending high, Showing benign Heaven still is nigh.

As the noble ship she dashed along, From her sides the sparkling fire flung. The sprar cast forth a fresh renewal, Shedding forth their liquid jewels.

But alast the boistorous tempests rise. And fills with awe—the traveller sighs— Peal aker tral the lightnings flash— The rain descends with a mighty dash.

The howling wind, the morning ship. 7. O'er the rough waves doth boldly skip, Pitches and writhes beneath her load, Trying to keep her onward road.

At length she gains her destined haven, And ne'er against a rock was driven. The God of Abraham did her keep, In safety on the briny deep. Gettysburg, Sept. 17, 1845. J. J.
