POETRY THY MOTHER, BOY. BY MRS. SIGOURNEY.

Who, when thine infant life was young, Delighted, o'er thy cradle hung, With pity soothed each childish moan The sleepless watched in hours of pain. for smiled till thou wert well again ? The sorrowed from thy sight to part, Thy mother, boy! How canst thou pay tender care by night and day? Vho joined thy sports with cheerful air joyed to see thee strong and fair ? Who, with fond pride, to guest and friend Would still the darling child commend? hose tears in secret flowed like rain, If sin or woe thy life did stain? and who, with prayer's unceasing sigh Thy MOTHER, boy! How can st thou pay ler tireless love by night and day?

Bear on thy brow the lofty smile f upright duty, free from guile With earnest diligence restrain The word, the look, that gives her pain! weary toil her path invades. Nerve thy young arm her steps to guide ! If fades her cheek, be near her side; and by a life of goodness pay

Sporting through the forest wide, Playing by the water side, Wandering o'er the heathy fells

Down within the woodland dells. All among the mountains wild, Dwelleth many a little child! In the baron's hall of pride. By the poor man's dull fire-side. Mid the mighty, 'mid the mean, Little children may be seen; Like the flowers that spring up fair, Bright and countless everywhere.

In the fair isles of the main, In the desert's lone domain, In the savage mountain glen Mong the tribes of swarthy men On a league of peopled ground Little children may be found! lessings on them !--- they in me Move a kindly sympathy, With their wishes, hopes and fears, With their laughter and their tears

With their wonder so intense And their small experience! On this wide earth are you known; Mid its labor and its cares. Mid its suffering and its snares
