Augustus Hoddrüge, in the vilage of North Blenheim, New York, was consumed by fire on Monday night week, and his wire and five children perished in the flames. It seems that Mr. Holdridge ciscaped with his youngest child, a boy about six years of age; and a daughter, aged 10, saved her-self, though frightfully burned, by leaping through a door or window. The mother was twice seen outside of the survent building, but the desire to save the rchildren, it is supposed, prompted her to rush back into the flames, from which
