PRICE OF BUTTER. The Commercial editor of the New York Herald predicts downfall in the price of butter. He touch the lowest point that it has seen 20 cents per gound, but on emigration setting in for that quarter, the shipping of butter to the Pacific coast became an important business, and eventually reached 100,000 firkins per year, and was worth about 1,500,000 to the traders in that article in this city. This demand of course enhanced the price of butter with its, and it soon reached 30 cents per pound at retail, and has averaged that for the last five years. But the people of California are beginning to produce it is doubtful whether 50,000 firkins were shipped from this port. This season, it is estimated, that the San Francisco people will have enough of home manufactured butter (of we may use that term) to last through the summer, and consequently the dealers in this city do not purpose to send but very little around the Cape. The prospect is, that in a few years this immense trade will be confined to home consumption. Although prices were never higher than they have been during the past spring, consumers may comfort themselves with the reflection that rates must come down before many months are over."

A large fire occurred at Syracuse. N. Y., on the morning of the 14th inst., destroying property to the amount of
