Attorney for the Commusioners. Coudersport, June 19, 1858.

Hon. Robert T. Conrad, and Hon. Job R. Tyson, both prominent citizens of Phila-delphia, and well known to the political world, died on the 27th inst., at their country residences near that city.

Judge Galbraith, of Erie, presided at our Court last week, and but two Commonwealth cases of any interest were tried.

George Sylvester confessed to petite forgery, and was fined $1,00 and sentenced to two injunction to "Love One Anormeet!" months imprisonment in county jail. N. J. Mills, was tried for obstruction of highway-A. Austin, prosecutor-and acquitted.

The Farmer.-What a sovereign is the intelligent farmer. Within his own realms of earth, he wields a sceptre to which all must bend. The balante of the world's life and comforts he holds in his stalwart hand. Neither courts, nor camps, nor armies, nor fleet can exist without his aid. He is the feederave, and the garmenter, virtually—of the race.
