To whem all Letters and Communications [Written for the Potter Journal.] THINGS ARE NOT WHAT THEY SEEM Terms--Invariably in Advance:

Stolen waters are the sweetest. Hidden streams the softest flow; Happiest hours are the fleetest, Wayside flowers the soonest blow. Darkest days linve rosiest mornings; Foulest thoughts the best adornings. Sunny climes have storms and tempests, Choicest trees bear bitter fruits; Serpents lie in greenest bowers, Poison lurks in sweetest flowers; And the sweetest of our roses Spring from ugly, tangled roots. Shadows sit beside the sunlight, And the brown shell sweetly sings; While the sky above is weeping, And the North-wind, onward sweeping,

Tokens from the far-land brings. From the storm-cloud's pent up darkness Darts the brightest lightning forth, And the little fairy snow-wreath Comes from out the frozen North. Stars at night a watch are keeping ;

Dreams come to us while we're sleeping. SALLY THORN. same 1 50 Aotes of Travel. 1 00 1 50 For the Potter Journal. MORE ABOUT 1 50 EGYPT AND THE EGYPTIANS
