THE BLESSED DEAD.

Oh, happy childhood ! tender buds of spring, Touched in the Maytime by a wandering frost,

Ye have escaped the summer's sultry wing; No drouth have parched you, and no wind hath tossed,

Ere winged passions stole into your rest, To rob the heart of all its dewy store. Now in the endless Maytime overhead, oo In starry gardens of the azure shore, Ye bloom in light, and are ror evermore The blessed dead. Ye youth and maidens, dear to joy and love, 30 00 But fallen midway between morn and noon 16 00 Or bird-like flown, as if some longing dove Should seek a better time while yet 'tis deed I am!" June, Leaving our fields forlorn! Oh, happy flight!

Gone while your hearts are full of summer

tune,
And ignorant of the autumnal blight— Ere yet a leaf hath withered on the bough, Or innocent rose bath drooped its dying head; Come with virgin lilies on your brow; Fe, singing in immortal youth, are now The blessed dead.

And ye, who in the harvest of your years, Were stricken when the sun was in mid-air. and left the earth bedewed at noon with tears, Ye have known all of life that is most fair. The laugh of April and the summer bloom. Ye with the orange-blossoms in your hair, Who sleep in the bridal chambers of the tomb Or ye, who with the sickle in your hand, Have bowed amid the sheaves the manly head And left the sod unto a mournful band-Ye are all numbered in your resting land, The blessed dead.

and ye, who like the stately upland oak, Breasted the full allotted storms of time, And took new strength from every gusty

And ye who, like a vine long taught to climb And weigh its native branches with ripe fruit-Much have ye suffered 'neath the frosty time Which autumn brings and winters loud dispute But now, transplanted in the fields afar, Your age is like a withered foliage shed—

And where youth's fountain sparkles like a star,
This have ye learned: they only live who are

But leave me poor.

Give to whom thou wilt thy smiles; Cast o'er others all thy wiles; But let thy tears flow fast and free, For me,-with me!

Giv'st thou but one look, sweet heart! A mord-no more! It is Music's sweetest part, When lips run o'er! Tis a part I fain would learn, So pr'ythee. here thy lessons turn. And teach me, to the close, All Love's pleasures-all its woes!
