TWO MINIATURES.

PT WIEN FORNET.

The fresh breeze awceping from the tow'ring

My aching heart seems filled with some new

While here, unconscious and slone,

Two miniatures are lying on the moss beside

Starting
To burst with laughter—infantiles like gold.

And these are mine; but yet their gladsome

Unheard by me, ere tuned in childish songs; Their words of love another's heart rejoices, While fate my weary pilgrimage prolongs. Be calm my heart; if Anna and her brother Should e'er forget a father's kind caress. Pate's angel whispers, we shall see each other, And bless the hour when we each other bless

I will not ask these painted lips to whisper Those words of fondness which my lips would hear;

But kiss the boy and kiss his tender sister,
And bathe then faces with affections tear. Two miniatures are lying on my bosom lonely, As I retrace the evening's shaded path; Two miniatures beloved by me, and only
