THE H. W. LONGFELLOW.

Two angels, one of Life and one of Death. Passed o'erour village as the morning brok The dawn was on their faces, and beneath, The sombre houses hearsed with plames of smoke.

Their attitude and aspect were the same, Alike their features and their robes of white: But one was crowned with amaranth, as with

And one with asphodels, like flakes of light I saw them pause on their celestial way :

Then said I, with deep fear and doubt oppressed. 7 00 Bent not so loud, my heart, lest thou betray The place where thy beloved are at rest!

And he who were the crown of asphodels, Descending at my door, began to knock, And my soul sank within me, as in wells The waters sink before an earthquake shock.

1 00 I recognised the nameless agonv. The terror and the tremor and the pain, That of before had filled or haunted

And now returned with three-fold strengt The door I opened to my heavenly guest, And listened, for I thought I heard God's

And, knowing whatsoe'er He sent was best, Dared neither to lament nor to rejoice.

Then with a smile that filled the house with light, "My errand is not Death, but Life." he said and ere I answered, passing out of sight,

On his celestial embassy he sped. Twas at thy door, O friend I and not at mine: The angel with the amaranthine wreath. Pausing, descended, and with a voice divine Whispered a word that had a sound like

Then feel upon the house a sudden gloom, A shadow on those features fair and thin: And softly from the hushed and darkened room, Two angels issued where only one went in.
