For the Potter Journal. AMERICA.

O, happy, proud America i Home and land of the free; is what your noble sons would boast, The land of Liberty?

They tell us how our fathers fought That this should never be the land Where bondage should abide ;-

But hark! a plaintive cry is borne Upon the southern gale,—
Tis human rights in bondage,— 'Tis the Africau's low wall.

Tis they that struggle to be free, In this, our glorious land. Where equal nights and privilege Each person should command

Oh! why should the poor African Forever be enslaved? Because their color differs, must They ever be deprav'd?

Then tell me, is this glorious land Worldy its Wide-spread fame,---The home for weary exiles' rest-The land that Freedom c.aims? Sunderlinville, Pa. LAURA.
