

SOILING CATTLE.

This subject is becoming one of especial interest to farmers, and more particularly to those who own small farms, and are under the necessity of economizing in a rigid degree, in order to support their families.

The principle and economy in soiling is this: a half an acre of land can easily be made to furnish green food for a cow or a horse during the season, till it becomes necessary to commence with winter feed in December, while it requires from an acre and a half to two acres of pasture to keep the same animal the same length of time. Besides this great saving of land, the manure of each animal soiled is worth the interest on two acres of land at $50 per acre, over what it would be on the common pasturage system.

To offset a portion of this advantage, we must take into the account the labor it requires to cut the green fodder and feed it out daily; and yet I am inclined to believe this labor is no more than a fair equivalent for the saving of time in driving stock to pasture, and keeping the fences in a condition far more expensive than the soiling system requires.

Indeed, on this system, fences may be dispensed with altogether, except the farm enclosure and roadsides. Fencing materials are now becoming an item of great expense to all farmers, not only in the materials themselves, but also in the labor of building the fences and keeping them in good repair.

Moreover, the waste land that fences occupy (which is very considerable) on the soiling system may all be cultivated—an item of considerable importance on small farms, where the land is divided into small fields.

To adopt this system with the best results, the land from which the green fodder is to come should be adjoining the barn, level and very fertile; and with the abundance of manure that is procured by soiling, there is no difficulty in making the land rich and productive.

The best article for soiling is clover, and next to this are corn sown in drills or broad-cast, millet, rye, sugar cane (sorghum), barley, Hungarian grass, and any variety of grass that grows tall and luxuriant which is relished by stock.

Sweet corn is the best to sow for soiling. I have used a kind called "Darlings prolific," which is well adapted to this purpose on account of its thrifty growth and its tendency to tiller, or throw out numerous suckers. It may be sown at any time from May 15th to July. It is best to sow it in drills about 18 inches apart with a seed sower. Cattle are kept in much better condition by soiling them. They are often turned out to pasture too early in the spring, before the grass is sufficiently grown to afford them enough to satisfy their hunger, and if there happens to be an early drouth they can not thrive, and they will hardly get over the effects of a bad winter's keep before they enter upon another.

On the soiling system, a drouth does not seriously affect the stock, as their supply of fodder is always green, succulent and abundant.

Independent of all the considerations of economy that I have named, cows give much more milk when soiled, and yield it more regularly than when pastured, and the waste of time, and the worrying of cows in driving them to distant fields in warm weather, are avoided. What can be more injurious to a noble cow than to send an unteaching boy to drive her a half a mile to pasture every day during the summer, with the thermometer often up to 90°, while, perhaps, she is worried by a dog, or pounded with a club, because she does not happen to suit in her gait, or overtake her driver? Milk, when thus heated by improper driving of cows, does not produce so much cream as it does under other circumstances, which is a good argument in favor of the soiling system.

Butter made from the milk of soiled cows does not have that oily appearance which is so often the case in warm weather, when cows are driven to and from their pasture. Nor is there any difficulty in butter "coming" in the warmest weather, when soiled.

A farmer in Waltham, Mass., is said to have made last season 250 lbs. of butter, from the milk of four cows, in thirteen weeks, fed on green fodder—chiefly grass, and corn sown broadcast. The cows were not out of the barnyard during that time. Two of the animals were heifers only two years old, which had calves in the spring, and the whole of the milk of one of them was taken by her calf during six weeks out of the thirteen, and some of the milk of the other was used in the family; from which circumstances it may be said that the four cows should not be rated at more than three ordinary ones.

A yard should be connected with the barn, of a size proportionate to the number of cattle soiled. For a half dozen cows, about a quarter of an acre is necessary, so that the weaker ones may not be annoyed by those that are stronger and more pugnacious. They should have an open shed to lie under in stormy weather during summer, and in November they should be housed in their stalls at night.

On this system of feeding, large quantities of roots can be fed to advantage. Indeed, let no man think that he can derive the greatest possible profit from his live stock who does not grow root crops. Roots are the key to all successful farming in England, and they are almost as important here. Carrots stand at the head of the list here, but turnips in England. Every milk cow should be fed a half a bushel of carrots, at least, daily, from November to June, or some other equivalent root that does not affect the milk.—T. B. MINER, Cor. of Genesee Farmer, Clinton, N. Y.

D. MOTT'S CHALYBEATE RESTORATIVE PILLS FOR IRON.

An aperient and Stomachic preparation of IRON purified of Oxygen and Carbon by combination in Hydrogen. Sanctioned by the highest Medical Authorities, both in Europe and the United States, and prescribed in their practice. The experience of thousands daily prove that no preparation of Iron can be compared with it. Impurities of the blood, depression of vital energy, pale and otherwise sickly complexions indicates its necessity in almost every appreciable case.

In cases of General Debility, whether the result of acute disease, or of the continued diminution of nervous and muscular energy from chronic complaints, one trial of this restorative has proved successful to an extent which would render further written attestation superfluous. Invalids so long bedridden as to have become forgotten in their own neighborhoods, have suddenly re-appeared in the busy world as if just returned from protracted travel in a distant land—Some very signal instances of this kind are attested to female Sufferers, emaciated victims of apparent marasmus, sanguineous exhaustion, critical changes, and that complication of nervous and desiccative aversion to air and exercise for which the physician has no name.

In Nervous Affections of all kinds, and for reasons familiar to medical men, the operation of this preparation of Iron must necessarily be salutary, for unlike the old oxide, it is vigorously tonic without being exciting and overheating; and gently, regularly aperient even in the most obstinate cases of constipation without being a gastric purgative, or inducing a disagreeable sensation.

It is this latter property, among others, which makes it so remarkable, efficient and permanent a remedy for Piles, upon which it also appears to exert a distinct and specific action, by dispersing the local tendency which forms them.

In Dyspepsia, Innumerable as are its causes a single box of these Chalybeate Pills has often sufficed for the most obstinate cases, including the attendant Colicities.

In unchecked Diarrhoea, even when advanced to Dysentery, emaciating, and apparently indelible, the effects have been equally decisive and astonishing.

In the local pains, loss of flesh and strength, debilitating cough, and intermittent hectic, which generally indicate Incipient Consumption, this remedy has allayed the alarm of friends and physicians, in several very gratifying and interesting instances.

In Scrophulous Tuberculosis, this medicated Iron has had for more than the good effect of the most cautiously balanced preparations of iodine, without any of their well known liabilities.

The attention of females cannot be too consistently invited to this remedy and restorative, in the cases of irregularities affecting them.

In Rheumatism, both chronic and inflammatory—in the latter, however, more decidedly—it has been invariably well reported, both as alleviating pain and reducing the swellings and stiffness of the joints and muscles.

In Intermittent Fevers it must necessarily be a great remedy and energetic restorative, and its progress in the new settlements of the West, will probably be one of high renown and usefulness.

No remedy has ever been discovered in the whole history of medicine, which exerts such powerful, happy, and fully restorative effects. Good appetite, complete digestion, rapid acquisition of strength, with an unusual disposition for active and cheerful exercise, immediately follow its use.

Put up in neat flat metal boxes containing 30 pills, price 50 cents per box: for sale by druggists and dealers. Will be sent free to any address on receipt of the price. All letters, orders, etc., should be addressed to R. B. LOCKE & Co., General Agents, 4-ly. 20 Cedar St., N. Y.
