

NEWS.

Up to this afternoon (Wednesday) we have no news of any decisive movements either on the part of the Government or of the Rebels.

New York, Oct. 4, 1861.—A surgeon of Col Mulligan's Brigade has reached Jefferson City with news from Lexington to Monday night.

We have a report of an engagement in Western Virginia, which is calculated to cheer all hearts if the details are accurately transmitted; we have, however, been so frequently disappointed in intelligence of similar battles, that we do not place implicit reliance upon the narrative and wait with interest for its confirmation.

The Rebels have evacuated Lexington, Mo., Price taking with him the seal of the State and $800,000 in money.

GOING TO FREMONT.—A long string of stalwart fellows were marching down the street yesterday afternoon. They all looked jolly, and nearly all had carpet bags.

It seems that John A. Washington, who speculated with the bones of the illustrious General of Mount Vernon, was killed while fighting as a Rebel.

Macdonald, the owner of Flora Temple is attempting to prove that he is not a secessionist, so that he may recover her.

The Future Office-holders.

President Lincoln makes no secret of the fact that when the rebellion is suppressed, he intends to make a new dispensation of the immediate list of offices in the gift of the Government.

What an impulse this will give to enlistments! The fact that the soldier's life is the open door to honorable positions, and perhaps independence, will stir up the young men of the loyal States to deeds of enterprise and daring.

Kit Carson Coming.

I met to-day an intelligent Englishman who is on his way back to his native place, after ten years' absence among the Indians on our western frontiers.

GEN. FREMONT.

The Herald's arrest of Gen. Fremont is happily no better founded than its death of Jeff. Davis, its capture of 2,000 Rebels by Gen. Butler the day after the defeat of Big Bethel, or any of its other fabrications.

The Massachusetts democracy, in their late State convention, passed strong Union resolutions, sustaining heartily the Administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war.

The Government is purchasing a large number of horses in Canada. The British Government proposes, in future, to carry on communications with its consuls in southern ports by means of British vessels.

Deliverance from Yankeeism

The overthrow of Yankee rule will yield us little profit, if we do not thoroughly eradicate all Yankee institutions from among us.

All physical labor, beyond that which is essential to health, is in its nature degrading, and is at the expense of the intellect or the body.

In a slave-holding community, every white man should be a gentleman, bred to arms and to manly exercises, and to habits of command.

In the Northern States the system of universal elections and universal suffrage, of free press, free speech, free labor, free schools and free love has been thoroughly tried and under the most favorable circumstances.

The moral and social results are not a whit more inviting. In their system numbers are everything, the individual man is nothing.

The battle of Manassas will have been fought in vain, if we do not morally, politically, and socially, remove ourselves as far as possible from this whole system.

From Kentucky.

The Union members of the Kentucky Legislature have issued a spirited address to the people of that State.

"Young men of Kentucky, to arms to arms to protect the home of your fathers, mothers and sisters.

It is stated that John H. Harney, the talented editor of the Louisville Democrat, or Hon. Garrett Davis, will be elected to the seat in the United States Senate forfeited by the traitor Breckinridge.

A Frankfort dispatch of the 27th says Breckinridge is certainly in Morgan county concentrating troops; and that Gen. Wm. O. Butler has addressed the Secessionists of Owen and other counties, counselling them to disperse and obey the laws.

The Ohio and Indiana troops are put in important positions and active service as soon as they arrive in Kentucky.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—The Bank Presidents to day voted unanimously to take ten millions of the second fifty million National Loan; $1,200,000 was bid at and above par for the new Massachusetts six per cent. State loan for $1,000,000.

MAUCH CHUNK, Sept. 28.—The gale of last night was terrific in this neighborhood. The trestle work on the top of Mount Pisgah, supporting the Gravity Railroad, was blown entirely away.

GENERAL McCLELLAN

Some fifteen or twenty horsemen—(officers and civilians)—sat on their saddles, immediately before us; but I was surprised to see that the hero, whom I had always heard described as a slightly built and short man, sat taller than most of them, on his horse, and had the bust and shoulders of an athlete.

McClellan's peculiar cut of his hair—(like the close fitting skull-cap of a helmet)—has already become classic. He is known by it. His beard also, worn as represented in the photographs, will probably remain in its present fashion, which already goes by his name—simply because it is exceedingly well suited to his features and expression.

But—(by way of peace-offering to the ladies, whose "Union" hero, for the present, General McCLELLAN unmistakably is)—I will mention my chance discovery of a susceptibility in the warrior.

I saw General McCLELLAN'S HORSE standing in the shade of a large tree, after the review; and (having just been kindly introduced to the gallant rider, by General McCall, at his tent,) I went up to complete my acquaintance with the Centaur-like picture I had been studying.

The English government is about to send three more regiments of infantry to Canada. The English journals seem to think that our government will take offence at this step on the part of her Majesty's government, and are swift to explain that they do not contemplate "any offensive operations against America."

By the latest advices from Europe we learn that a collision between the people of Hungary and the Austrian government is imminent. It is difficult to conjecture to what complications a revolutionary war in Hungary may lead.

Parson Brownlow has at last succumbed to the Davis despotism. He does not renounce his opinions of the "heresy of secession," but as he is not a "candidate for martyrdom, or imprisonment," and cannot battle with any hope of success, and, unarmed and alone, against "eleven States in arms and in full uniform," he has come down from his extreme position, "not of choice, but of necessity."

The capture of Hatteras has thrown confusion into the rebel camp everywhere. At New Orleans it created a tremendous fright. They believe that their turn will come soon.

So particular are this firm as to the articles used in compounding their various remedies, that they have this drug, like some others they consume, gathered for them by a skilful agent of their own in the tropical regions of its growth.

McClellan, at the time of his appointment to the command of the army of the Potomac, is reported to have declared it as his opinion that the present war would be one of artillery, and it is stated that he has now in his command fifty-six batteries of field artillery, of six guns each, or 336 guns.

The returns have not all been received, but the result will not be materially changed.

Our troops in Western Virginia have certainly behaved admirably in every engagement with the enemy. They are always ready for a fight, and always do fight, too, like heroes. If the Eastern troops had always done as well, we believe the contest would have been pretty much decided ere this.

A Presbyterian clergyman, while walking the deck of a steamer at St. John, N. B., where secessionism had considerable footing, noticing the American flag flying from the mast-head of a ship, tauntingly said to Col. Favor: "Why don't you take a slice off that flag, since you have lost a portion of your country?" Yankee like, the Colonel quickly replied: "Why don't you tear a leaf from your Bible because a part of your church have fallen from grace?" The clergyman had no more to say on that subject.
