KNICKERBOCKER MAGAZINE FOR 1862.

In the beginning of the last year, when its present proprietors assumed control of THE KNICKERBOCKER, they announced their determination to spare no pains to place it in its true position as the leading literary Monthly in America. When rebellion had raised a successful front, and its armies threatened the very existence of the Republic, it was impossible to permit a Magazine which in its circulation reached the best intellects in the land, to continue in a purely literary course, as if insensible or indifferent to the dangers which threatened the Union. The proprietors accordingly gave notice that it would present in its pages forcible expositions with regard to the great question of the times: How to preserve the United States of America in their integrity and unity. How far this pledge has been redeemed, the public must judge. It would, however, be mere affectation to ignore the seal of approbation which the public has already placed on these efforts. The proprietors gratefully acknowledge this, and it has led them to embark in a fresh undertaking, the publication of THE CONTINENTAL MONTHLY, devoted to literature and national policy, in which Magazine those readers who have followed with sympathy the political and social views so forcibly expressed of late in our pages, may find them still further enforced by the most eminent and energetic minds in America.

The Knickerbocker, while it will remain firm in support of the Union, will be found, according to the originally expressed intention of the publisher, devoting itself more exclusively to art and letters, and in maintaining its long established position as the leader in America of the widely varied departments of literature to which it is specially devoted. The number for January commences its thirtieth year. With such antecedents as it possesses, it seems unnecessary to make any special pledges as to the future; but it may not be amiss to say that it will be the aim of its conductors to make it more and more deserving of the liberal support it has hitherto received. The same eminent writers who have contributed to it during the past year will continue to enrich its pages, and in addition, contributions will appear from others of the highest reputation and from many rising authors. We shall, as before, specially cultivate the genial and humorous in every variety; but during the coming year, however, the Knickerbocker will receive many contributions in the higher departments of literature, embracing Critical, Historical, Biographical, Scientific, or Ethnographical articles, in all of which special pains will be taken to introduce that spirited and agreeable tone and style which have of late years distinguished really first-class writings of this nature from the dry and pedantic essays of the old school. We intend to devote especial zeal and labor to attract to our pages such reading, and confidently anticipate pre-eminence in this department.

In the January Number we shall publish "Sunshine in Letters," by Charles Godfrey Leland—the first of a series of papers on the cheerful and joyous in Literature and Art, which will be found interesting to the most general reader, while at an early date will appear the First Chapters of a most entertaining and instructive description of American Life, in the form of a First-class Novel. The Knickerbocker, in short, while retaining the best of the old, will continually add to the cream of the new.
