TO MY COUNTRY.

Only to bend their foreheads down lew, While fast and bitter their hot tears flow Only to weep and to wail for you?

Cr to kiss some brave warrior's hand, Held for a parting pressure out, And say, in a voice too calm for doubt;

The cold, mangled form in our breast, That the world thinks it has given rest Low down under the southern sky ?

Only to pray at night-time, and weep While we braid for the victors garlands brighty Thinking, the while, with a sob of fright, Where 'tis our own beloved one's sleep ?

Nothing? Yet loudly the cannon's peel, The fields are all dazzling with burnished steel.

And thy banners are all unfurled !

"Give us something to do for theel. Let us toil for the Land of the Free

How can we only watch and wait? Thou hast need of us in this strife-And struggle with Wrong and Hate."

Hark ! hark ! how the shrill fifes scream The drum-roll sounds through the frey;

But we fold onr hands in despair, And sit with hushed breaths to the end Only dreaming at night of a friend, We sob out a pitiful prayer.
