DEDICATED TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE U. S.

BY J. T. POWERS. Strike for Country and for God ! Now's the Day and now's the Hour, Draw the sword and wield the spear Gleaming o'er the sacred sod. Strike for Country and for God! Hail the Holy Jubilee, When the iron chains shall fall And earth's millions all go free.

Strike for Country and for God! Every blow ye deal and give Now proclaims with word of power Earth's oppressor's shall not live. Strike for Country and for God!

God it is who leads the host, Heaven's Great Captain now commands Every soldier to his post. Strike for Country and for God!

Let each man his country bear In his arms and on his heart Strengthened by the might of prayer. Strike for Country and for God !

Let the Red Sea parted be; Smitten by Jehovah's rod For the myriads of the Free! Strike for Country, and for God I Smite the forman to the dust : Free the captive from bis chain;

Strike for Liberty! ye must! Strike for Country and for God! By the blood of martyrs slain-Martyrs who have bled for God-Let their blood ne'er cry in vain!

Strike for Country and for God ! God is on the side of right, Draw the sword nor draw in vain-God shall teach your hands to fight.

Strike for Country and for God I And ne'er quit-the blood-red field Till the foe shall bite the dust And the tyrant power shall yield. Strike for Country and for God!

Man be true to Liberty— Break the chain that Wrong hath forged, Help the Christ of God go-free! Strike for Country and for God! By the blood of Him who gave All he was or honed to be

A Mother's Kiss .- A day or two ince, a ragged and dirty looking boy, fourteen years of age, pleaded guilty in the superior criminal court to having fired a building. For two years past, since the death of his mother, he had wandered around the streets a vagrant, without a home or human being to care for him, and he had become in every respect a "bad boy." A gentleman and lady interested themselves in his behalf, and the latter took him one side to question him. She talked with him kindly, but without make ing the slightest impression upon his feel: ings, and to all she had said he manifests the greatest indifference, until she asked him if no one ever kissed him. This simple inquiry proved too much for him; and bursting into tears replied:

"No one since my mother kissed me." That one thought of his poor, dead mother, the only being, perhaps, who had ever spoken to him kindly before, touched him to his heart, a hardened young crimical as he was. This little incident caused other tears than his .- Boston Recorder.

GRAND WORDS .- The following ringing sentences are from the conclusion of a late sermon of Henry Ward Beecher:

"I am not a prophet. I am not sant guine though hopeful. I think victory awaits us at every step, but if God thinks liberty too dear to be purchased so cheaply, we can give more. We can give more sons, more treasure—will give everything -but this country shall be one, and one undivided. The Atlantic and Pacific shall say it—deep answering to deep.
