TAKE OFF THE SWORD, McCLELLAN." RITTEN BY A SOLDIER FOR THE MISSOURI DEM

OCEAT.

Take off thy sword, McClellan, Take off thy coat of blue; Strip quickly from the shoulders Those starry badges too; You are no more a soldier, You've changed your base again On Peace's platform standing The garb of war is vain.

When first we met, McClellan, You led a hero band; A grand, devoted army Was then at your command-The finest on the planet, "It longed to meet the foe, It needed but a leader To strike the crushing blow.

Where are they now, McClellan, Those heroes whom you led? The cry of anguish answers, "Alas, they're with the dead." They sleep in peace eternal, Those true, devoted braves; The only peace you conquered, The peace of soldiers' graves Alack! alack! McOlellan, Our faith was hard to shake, We trusted long your promise, That you would Richmond take Till back you staggered, leading, Your back towards the foe, With columns torn and bleeding, And banners drooping low.

But now you hold, McClellan, Another high command, Another force is mustered, And you lead on the band; And is that force enlisted To fight the Union wars, And plant on Richmond's hill-tops The flag of Stripes and Stars?

Alas! alas! McClellan, A craven crew you lead, "Peace" glitters on their banners, While yet our soldiers bleed, They basely cry "surrender." Ere the Union is restored: They kiss the feet of traitors And throw away the sword.

Have you no shame, McClellan? Have you forgot the past? Have you so long led freemen, To herd with slaves at last? Alas? alas! McClellan, It seemeth so to be, When you raise the fing of traitors And drop that of the free!
