WHEN BABY CHARLIE DIED

When baby Charlie died, 'Twas only to this earth-life; Two blue eyes opened wide And smiled upon the Angels Who drew him to their side.

Two tiny feet unshod, Pressed softly that sweet pasture,-The upper fold of God; Where watched by the Good Shepherd, So many lambs have trod.

While night and Death were ours Two little hands were busy In Heaven's immortal bowers Plucking the fruit of gladness, Twining its fadeless flowers.

His voice, to us so still, Woke, with a gush of music All Zion's holy hill; Through the high courts of Heaven Angelic harp-strings thrill!

While we, with spirits tried, Seek, through the paths of duty To reach our darling's side. Thus light was born of darkness, When baby Charlie died.
