

honest men who went out to save our liberties and our Union, now sleep in forgotten graves, and in every household in the land there is mourning for their untimely death. Their murderers, red-handed and unrepentant, meet and send some of the more prominent among their number to represent them in our Congress, and Andrew Johnson says let them in. It is monstrous!

Why repeal the test oath? Is any man fit for a seat in Congress who can't take it? When Breckinridge, Slidell, and others left the Senate to go into the Rebel Government, they left unexpired terms of office in this. Why not repeal the resolutions that passed, expelling them? They are loyal now, and I pledge my word would make better officers of the Government than some who have been elected. I assert, without fear of successful contradiction, that the President's policy, if carried out, would lead to the payment, in less than ten years, of the rebel debt, and the repudiation of our own. It would make the South unsafe, as the residence of any loyal man, black or white.

Now what is the policy of Congress? It is to admit the members from the Southern States at the earliest practicable moment. It seeks first to inquire whether the applicants are loyal, next if their States are in a proper condition to be represented by loyal men. The present Congress has passed no laws imposing burdens upon any of the Southern States. The Freedmen's Bureau Bill did not scantily provide for, and protect a class of loyal citizens, who, if left to the tender mercies of their late masters, must suffer unheard of cruelties. In conclusion, and in connection with this subject I desire to quote a few newspaper remarks of a recent speech of Hon. Lyman Trumbull, of Ill.

"Mr. Trumbull took up and successfully refuted the various objections urged against the bill, and scathingly rebuked those who had at first voted for it and subsequently approved the President's veto. Congress had been condemned by the Secretary of State for declining to admit such men as Alexander H. Stevens and Herschel V. Johnson, recently occupying prominent places in the so-called Confederacy, to our National Legislature at Washington city. Until the Committee on Reconstruction decided favorably in regard to the States referred to, matters would remain as now. It had been a source of regret that such loyal men as Colonel W. B. Stokes and Horace Maynard, of Tennessee, were kept out this long; but until Tennessee was in a condition to maintain her loyalty, such men would not desire to obtain their seats. Too much blood and treasure had been expended to permit rebels to take charge of State Legislatures. Congress is making no war upon the President's policy, in his judgment. We will triumphantly accomplish all our difficulties before Congress closes and perhaps before many days some of the eleven States may be admitted; but we will not receive those who will make treason honorable—loyalty dishonorable. This is the fixed and determined policy of Congress, and he hoped, in connection with this subject, that they would all adhere to it until none but loyal States should come into this Union."

It will be gathered from the above that the policy of Congress is not to keep the loyal States out, but to make them loyal and then let them in, "not," (as a friend of mine at Coudersport, would say), "to save them in their sins, but from their sins." And so mote it be.

A new trial has been ordered in the case of Gonzales and Pellicier, recently convicted at New York of the murder of the Cuban, Otero.

An important bill has been introduced into the House to provide for the safety of the lives of passengers on steam boats. It provides several stringent regulations, and gives the proper agents authority to enforce them.

The monthly report of the Pension Bureau for the month just past exhibits an addition in the pension rolls of 4,023 new names. Of these, 2,216 were widows, mothers and tutors cases, and the remaining 817 were invalids. During the same length of time 645 claims were rejected—460 being invalids, and 185 widows, so called. Nearly 30,000 circulars and letters were despatched from the office during the month (the larger proportion being in relation to business connected with the widow's branch), in response to inquiries made of the office by agents, claimants and others.

The following extract is taken from official letters received at the war department from Savannah.

"The veto of the President will, I fear do harm by encouraging the former owners to try to take advantage of the freed people who, in many instances, have already prepared their lands for planting, in fair expectations of keeping them, and will render the owners more unwilling to compromise, as they hope to obtain everything they now demand. Further it will discourage the freed people, who have in good faith prepared to plant on the land granted them, and make them doubtful as to whether or not any promise made them is fulfilled by the government."

Colonel W. A. Browning, late private secretary to President Johnson, died last night at his father's residence, on Missouri avenue, in this city, of inflammation of the bowels. Col. Browning was a native of this city, but spent some years in the West. He returned to Washington as secretary to Andrew Johnson when Senator from Tennessee, and afterwards was upon the staff of the latter when Military Governor of Tennessee. He accompanied Mr. Johnson to Washington on his return here as Vice President, and received the appointment of private secretary to the President on his accession to the Executive chair. This position Col. Browning held until his appointment as secretary of legation to Mexico. He will be sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends.

THE POTTER COUNTY JOURNAL.
Coudersport, Tuesday Evening, Mar. 13, 1865.

Local and General.

We will give a Biographical notice of Gen. Geary in our next.

Blacksmiths will find something to their advantage by consulting our advertising columns.

It has been decided to build a Church at Raymond Corners the coming season. Proposals are invited by advertisement in another column.

The Coudersport Academy for the Spring Term has opened with Eighty-five students. It is now in a more prosperous condition than it has been for many years. Mr. Allen deserves praise for the able manner in which its affairs have been conducted.

We regret to learn that Maj. Sam'l M. Mills' Hotel and Stables, in Titusville, were destroyed by fire last week. They were but partially insured. All the buildings on the square were destroyed.

Our young friend, Pierre A. Stebbins, Jr., has been appointed a member of the Republican State Central Committee, for Potter County. This is a good appointment as he is one of our most active and hard working Republicans and will make a strong canvasser.

The New York Tribune says that Gen. Butler intends to erect extensive cotton factories on the James river, near Richmond.

Special despatches to the Cincinnati Gazette states that the small-pox is prevailing to an alarming extent throughout many parts of the South. The Huntsville Independent says that, unless some organized effort is made to arrest its progress, it will become epidemic and sweep over the whole land.

The Ohio House of Representatives have passed a bill, by a vote of seventy to fourteen, fixing eight hours for a day's labor.

An office for the sale of Fenian bonds has been opened on Pennsylvania Avenue Washington city. Until the Committee on Reconstruction decided favorably in regard to the States referred to, matters would remain as now. It had been a source of regret that such loyal men as Colonel W. B. Josh Billings says: "I always advise short sermons, especially on a hot Sunday. If a minister rattles off a boring 40 minutes, he has either got a poor pulpit, or else he is a boring in the wrong place."

A doctor up town recently gave the following prescription for a lady: "A new bunnet, a cashmere shawl, and a new pair of gaiter boots." The lady, it is needless to say has entirely recovered.

THE GREAT WEST.
Homes of the sturdy farmers who look about them over the broad prairies, and see for miles their lands and granaries, are often rendered desolate by the death of a beloved child from the ravages of the deadly Croup. Cough Balsam never fails to cure it, and is also the best remedy in the world for Croup, Coughs, and all throat and lung diseases. Cough Balsam is the only remedy known that is certain to cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and in fact all disorders proceeding from the stomach and bowels.

From the Chicago Insurance Chronicle.
ACCIDENT INSURANCE.
It is strange that the plain people of insurance extended to include a class of risks more common and dangerous to humanity—accidents to life and limb. The merchant insures himself against a loss by fire by a policy of his goods. It is his security in the sum of several thousands of dollars, while the security and profit of the underwriters is found in the nice adjustment of the average of risks which is the business of the insurers to learn and to act upon. But in every day's business, in his movements to and from his store and his dwelling, in his journeyings by rail and sea every citizen is exposed to a peril which is far greater than that in case of his goods. A broken nut, an insecure bolt, a weak boiler plate, the fall of a building, the derangement of the incidents of life that constitute safety, may cost him his life or lay him up to a helpless sufferer. But his case is even stronger of the man in moderate circumstances, the father of a family, dependent upon him for support. An accident to him is the temporary or permanent loss of their all. Six weeks expensive illness in recovery from a wound, such as any hour in the day the mechanic may receive from the tool whereby he earns his daily bread, may visit actual penury upon the dependent wife and children. How much greater such a disaster than the sweeping destruction by fire, which only destroys the home and its contents; leaving the stout man that won them to regain them. We wonder that so tardily our mechanics and men in moderate circumstances began to think of these things: Not that the policy which secures the home against loss should be disregarded, but that there should be included therewith the other form of personal protection so easily secured. Every traveler by rail can spare the small sum that will compensate him in part for the evils of a disaster to life and limb during his journey. Every railroad employee can devote the insignificant amount required, to become a sheet anchor to his family and those dependent on him in the event of disaster in his calling. No mechanic in the shop among which his place and working tools can afford to go without the safeguard that it is only common prudence for him to secure against the possibility of weeks of slow recovery from accident or for the evils to his household from his death. Professional men, with many drains upon their moderate incomes, are especially the subjects of benefit from this system, since accidents befall all humanity alike, and the policy of this kind is a breakwater, an outer wall of defence to the family whose support may temporarily fail or be cut off.

We firmly believe that the time will come when the principle of Accident Insurance will be engrained into the very centre of ordinary prudence in every class of our humanity, when men will no more be persuaded to live unprotected in this manner, than to live unprotected in the business forms and practices that are the safeguards of trade.

RALLY THE SYSTEM.
After a disease has been conquered, there is still the weakness that it leaves behind it to be removed. Convalescence is a tedious affair. If the enfeebled and flaccid mind, the shattered nerves, the thin and watery blood could speak, they would cry for help. In too many cases such help as is given them is not of the right kind. They find stimulants of commerce do harm. They find a temporary fame, which is a mockery. They effect passes, and the last state of him who uses them is worse than the first.
Not such is the effect of Hutter's's Stomach Bitters. There is no drawback to their tonic properties. Balsamic plants and bark contribute their restorative juices to render this soothing and strengthening preparation a protective and remedial agent. Its basis is the only stimulant which has ever been produced containing no fuel oil of any other deleterious element. The most careful and skillful chemists have analyzed the Bitters, and pronounced them harmless.
This is scientific testimony; but the testimony of the hundreds of thousands who have experienced the preventative and curative effects of the Great Vegetable Tonic and Alternative of modern times is still more conclusive. In fever and ague, dyspepsia, biliousness, nervous debility, general debility, and chronic complaints, it is as nearly infallible as anything in this fallible world can be. Sold everywhere.
