those which remained loyal, and other posi-tions of a like character. Yet we cannot help reeling no little auxiety for the peace of the southern states, if the military, which now in many places holds disorder in check, shall be withdrawn, as of course it must be. We hear of the blacks in Wilmington arming to to be whipped without being permitted to pro-duce the testimony of colored men in their defence, we hear of a gang of desperadoes in Sumpter churdy of Tenneesee warding the loyalinhab-tiants to leave the county on peril of their itiants to leave the county on peril of their lives, while the governor of that state himself implores the President not to withdraw the troops of the United States. These are not by any means the only indications of an unsettled state of things in that region. All over the South society is like an ocean after a tempest, heaving and tossing tumultuously and casting up to the surface the mire of its bed.
