THE PROUD MISS MACBRIDE. A Legend of Gotham. BY JOHN G. SANE.

O, terribly proud was Miss Mac Bride,. The very personification of pride, As she mined along in fashion's tide, Adown Broadway on the proper side-When the golden sun was setting: There was pride in the head she carried so high. Pride in her lip and pride in her eye, And world of pride in the very sigh That her stately bosom was fretting;

A sigh that a pair of elegant feet, Sauffled in satin, should kiss the street-The very same that the vulgar greet, In common leather, not over "neat"— For such is the common booting!

Fo a vulgar German, it wasn't germane To a fady of high condition! Even her graces-not her grace, Chilled with the touch of her icy face, Sat very stiffly upon her!

The pever confessed a favor alond, Like one of the simple common crowd, But coldly smiled, and faintly bowed— As who should say: "You do me proud; And do rourself an honor!"

And yet the pride of Miss Mac Bride. A though it had fifty hobbies to ride, Had really no foundation; But like the labrics that gossips devise -

Those single stories that often arise, And grow til they reach a four-story size-Was merely a funcy creation! 'Tis a cutious fact as ever was known

For John Hall worked in his early day. According to public rumpr : And he lived "up town," in a splendid square

A wicked wag, who meant to deride Called honest John, "Mr. Phenix Mac Bride, "Because he rose from his ashes."

Little by little, he grew to be rich, By saving candle-ends and "sich," Till he reached at last and opulent niche,— No very uncommon affair: For history quite confirms the law Expressed in the ancient Scottish saw,

"A Mickes may come to be mair." Alack! for many ambitious beaux! She hung their hopes upon her nose. (The figure is quite Horatian)— Until from Mabit the member grew As very a hook as ever eye knew.

To the commonest observation. thriying tailor begged her hand. But she gave "the fellow" to understand By a violent manual action. She perfectly scorned the best of his clan, And reckoned the ninth of any man An exceedingly Vulgar Fraction.

Another, whose sign was a golden boot, Was mortified with a bootless suit, In a way that-was quite appalling; For though a regular sutor by trade,
He wasn't a sutor to suit the maid,
Who cut him off with a saw—and bade "The cobbler keep to his calling."

The muse must let a secret out-There isn't the faintest stadow of doubt That folks who oftenest sneer and flout At the "dirty, low mechanicals," Are they whose sires by pounding theik knees Or coiling their legs, or trades like these, Contrived to win their children ease

From poverty's galling manacles) A rich tobacconist comes and sues, And, thinking the lady would scarce refuse Δ man of his wealth and liberal views, Began at once with "If you choose-And could you really love him'-But the lady spoiled his speech in a huff, With an answer rough and ready enough

To let him know she was up to snuff, And altogether above him. A voung attorney with winning grace, Was scarce allowed to "open his face." Ere Miss Mac Bride had closed his case With true judicial colerity;
For the lawyer was poor and "seedy" to boot And to say, the rady discarded his suit,

Is merely a double verity. The last of these who came to court, Was a lively bean, of the dapper sort, "Without any visible means of support"— A crime by no flagrant In one who wears an elegant coat,

But the very point on which they vote A ragged fellow a "vagrant." A courtly fellow was Dapper Jim, Sleek and supple, and tall and trim, And smooth of tongue as neat of limb; And, maugre his meagre pocket, You'd say from the glittering tales he told. That Jim had slept in a cradle of gold,

With fortunatus to rock it! Now, Dapper Jim his courtship plied, (I wish the fact could be denied.) With an eye to the purse of old Mac Bride, And really "nothing shorter!" For he said to himself, in his greedy lust, ·Whenever he dies-as die he must-And yield to heaven his vital trust, He's very sure to 'come down with his dust, In behalf of his only daughter."

And the very magnificent Miss Mac Bride, Half in love and half in pride, No token of proper pride to lack— To be a bride without the "Mack."

With much disdain consented ! Alas! that people who've got their box Of cash beneath the best of locks. Secure from all financial shocks, Should stock their fancy with fancy stocks,

And madly rush upon Wall Street rocks, Without the least apology! TERCHANT - Dealer in Pri Goods, Ready-made, And issued notes with a banker's force,

Are sound beyond all need of repairs, Should ever attempt the bulls and bears Of Mammon's fierce Zoology! Old John Mac Bride one fatal day, Became the unresisting prey

Of fortune's undertakers And staking all on a single die. His foundered bark went high and dry Among the brokers and breakers!

At his trade again, in the very shop Where, years before he let it drop, He follows his ancient calling-Cheerily, too, in poverty's spite, And sleeping quite as sound at night, As, when at fortune's giddy height,

He used to wake, with a dizzy fright, From a dismal dream of falling. But alas! for the haughty Miss Mac Bride, Twas such a shock to her precious pride, She couldn't recover although she tried Her jaded spirits to rally; 'Twas a dreadful change in human affairs,

From a place 'Up-town' to a nook 'Up-stairs'
From an Avenue down to an Alley! Twas little condolence she had-God wot-From her 'troops of friends, who hadn't for-The airs she used to borrow: [got

They had civil phrases enough, but yet Twas plain to see that their "deepest regret" Was a different thing from sorrow! They owned it couldn't well have been worse To go from a full to an empty purse : To expect a "reversion," and get a reverse,

Was truly a dismal feature! But it wasn't strange-t'ney whispered-at all That the summer of Pride should have its Fall, Was quite according to nature!

And one of those who make a pun, As if it were quite legitimate fun To be blazing away at every one With a regular, double-loaded gun-Remark'd that moral Transgression Always brings retributive stings To cradle-makers as well as kinge: For "making light of cereous things. Was a very wick-ed profession!

And vulgar people—the saucy charls— Inquired about "the price of pearls,"
And mocked at her situation; "She wasn't ruined-they ventured to hope Because she was poor, she needn't mone-Few people were better off for soap, And that was a consulation !

And to make her cup of wee run over, Her elegant, ardent, plighted lover Was the first to forsake her: He quite regretted this step, 'twas true-The lady had pride enough for two,

But that alone would never do To quiet the butcher and baker! And now the unhappy Miss Mac Bride-The merest ghost of her early pride-Bewails her lonely position ; Cramp'd in the very narrowest niche, Above the poor, and below the rich-Was ever a worse condition?
