Dr. Franklin and the South Carolina

Planter.

A friend relates to us that the Summer before the war it the house of a hospitable South Carolina planter, he was up one morning with the sun and was about to venture forth on a morning walk, when he was checked by the planter at the door.

"You cannot pass, Sir. Too early."

"You cannot pass, Sir. Too early."

"Yearly to bed and early to rise will make a man healthy and wealthy and wise."

"Very tine, Sir; but a failacy. Early rising and the inhabition, upon an empty stomach, of the morning malaria of this country, North and South, have been the death of thousands—the death of thousands, sir, from time of Capt, John Smith to this day. Wait ill after breakfast, fortify your stomach with a cup of hot coffee, and then noxious vapors of the night being exhaled by the sun, we will take a morning ilde."

"But, my deor Colonel, I am always fortified with a wine gloss of HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS."

"Ah, then, sir, you may silek to Dr. Franklin.—Hostetter's agent at Charleston supplies me, and I am expecting a box to day with my wagon. Those Bitters, I flud, are a sure protective against all the levers resulting from malaria. Doctor Franklia holds good, sir, even in the exwanps of South Carolina, if fortified with Rostetter's Bitters.

By J. T. TROWBRIDGE.

From personal observations and experience during mouths of Southern travel.

The author has had letters of introduction from men in high standing, to the head of all government departments in the South, civil and military. Whatever is known by these men of the suffering of the past present condition of things, as well as plans for the fature, will be made known in this book. The great popularity of the author, and intense interest in the subject, combine to make this by far the greatest selling book before the public, while our very liberal inducements prisent a rare chance for Agents to make money.
