

The bonnets worn by ladies abroad have dwindled down to a mere tiny bit of ornamented lace, so small that they are spoken of as suppositions.

Two million five hundred thousand dollars in Canadian coin foot up the expense incurred by that government in consequence of the Fenian invasion.

A few days since a young man named Cunningham fell from the tower of the new Lutheran church, in Greenville, Pa., a distance of sixty-five feet, without sustaining any material injury.

Maximilian, it is said, has had a thousand nightgowns caught in Austria and shipped to Mexico. The poor fellow, amid the distracting cares of his tottering empire, must certainly have something to comfort him.

A house in Great Falls, N. H. where tenements are extremely scarce, is being suffered to go to decay by the owner because he has been told by "the spirits" that if he put it in a habitable condition he will surely die.

Mayor Monroe, of New Orleans, would not hoist the flag of the City Hall at half mast in respect to the memory of General Scott. He is the man who was pardoned by the President that he might occupy his present position.

A New Haven company has begun the manufacture of a compressed stone for building purposes. It is made of sand, pulverized quartz and silicate of soda, and hardens within twenty-four hours from the consistency of putty to the solidity of stone.

A farmer in Staffordshire, England, lost some cows lately from the rinderpest, and got an idea that he was suffering from the disease himself. His medical adviser, who was a wit, agreed with him and sent him to the apothecary with a sealed prescription. Both patient and druggist were rather astonished at reading: "This man has got the plague; take him into the backyard and shoot him according to the act of Parliament."

When the call was issued for a Soldiers' State Convention, to be held in this city, the democratic leaders endeavored to take the movement under their patronage, for the purpose of bettering Mr. CLYMER'S chances of election. In various counties they sought, by crafty appliances, to pack delegations favorable to their scheme. By noisy exultation they gave the impression to the uninitiated that, speaking after the manner of Mr. Sewall, "everything was lovely." But when the Convention came to act, the fact was disclosed that the soldiers stood solidly by the principles and measures for which they battled.

The Clymer men are not willing to give up, so. Hence they have resolved that a "real Soldiers' Convention" shall be held. To this end they had a preliminary meeting at Harrisburg on the 28th ult.—Pittsburg Gazette.

WILLIAM B. REED, now so prominent as one of the counsel for the "Martyr of Fort Sumner," is a grandson of that Joseph Reed who, at the close of the Revolutionary war, prosecuted and secured the conviction and execution of certain Tories for treason. A year or two ago this William B. Reed wrote a biography of his grandfather, and therein, referring to these trials, says:

"But looking back through nearly seventy years, with due allowance for errors of judgment and conduct in times of high excitement, it is impossible to question that these men were properly brought to justice, fairly tried and justly condemned."

The men thus condemned with a justice which Reed pronounces it "impossible to question" were merely obscure persons, privates in the enemy's ranks. They were babes in innocence compared with Jefferson Davis.

It is no longer fashionable "at Court" to speak of the late troubles in this country as a Rebellion. Mr. Secretary SEWARD, in his official announcement of the death of Gen. CASS, speaks of his "exalted patriotism at a recent period of political disorder." The Baltimore American expects next to hear the most terrible and groundless rebellion on record spoken of as "an unfortunate family quarrel," or, as Mrs. Partington would express it, "a slight contumacious of our internal relations."

The Galveston (Texas) Bulletin says: "The News calls the late war the 'war of revolution.' We protest against the name. That term, by common consent, is the name of the most glorious and most honorable war of history. It has become specific. The war led by Jeff. Davis was more like the insurrection led by Lucifer than the glorious revolution of Washington."

HON. GEORGE V. LAWRENCE, representative in Congress from the twenty fourth (Penn.) district, has been unanimously nominated for re-election by the Republicans of the four counties of Lawrence, Beaver, Greene and Washington, of which it is composed.

Gov. BROWNLOW is expected to call the Tennessee Legislature together in special session to ratify the Constitutional Amendment. That done, loyal representatives from that State will be admitted to seats in Congress.

The well-known clown DAN RICE is announced for a performance on the Johnsonian platform as a Congressional candidate in the Nineteenth District of Pennsylvania.

The report reaches us by the recent European mails that Kossuth, who has been known to be in Italy for some years past, is to be furnished with means and men to stir up an outbreak in Hungary, in order to make a diversion of Austrian troops from Italy.

A DEAD SHOT.—The last California mail brings the particulars of the following remarkable story:

A stage coach was overhauled by highwaymen, on a lonely road in Nevada county, between Marysville and Downville, at four o'clock on the morning of May 1st, and robbed of $8000 belonging to Wells, Fargo & Co. Within a few hours thereafter the sheriff's posse was started out in different directions, and Steve Venart struck what proved to be the right trail up Yuba river. He followed his lonely, and difficult road along, into a rocky ravine three miles from human habitation, and saw at some distance above him, partially concealed by rocks, a man counting over money. The man saw him, and Steve thought the time of one of them had come, for the robber was already taking aim when Venart fired. Instantly another robber appeared, but took shelter to fire, and when Steve saw the root of this man's hair he sent him the contents of his second barrel, and, having loaded anew, ran forward to secure the booty before others of the robber band should appear, confident that two of them were done for. He had already got the money bags when a third robber showed himself, still higher up the ravine, and Steve now fired his third shot, which not taking fatal effect, a fourth was fired and a dead man's body rolled down among the rocks. Steve Venart brought the news of his adventure and the $8000 into Nevada City at 2 o'clock in the same afternoon of the robbery, and soon after the three dead bodies were brought in—the first shot through the heart, the second through the right eye and the third through the body and head; the first and second were found clenching their cocked pistols. Wells, Fargo & Co. promptly awarded Steve $3000, and at last accusers Steve and his rifle were lionizing in central California.

A Pen Picture of Thaddeus Stevens.—Thaddeus Stevens is just coming in from his committee-room, and looks so feeble, the great old man, it makes me sorry. The men abroad who assault him with such ferocity, if they could see him now, would be quite disarmed. His spirit is not bated, his sarcasm cuts as keenly as ever, his wit flashes as brightly, his great intellect seems in no wise dimmed; yet the hand of Time lies heavy upon him. The will which never swerves, which always conquers and rules men, is powerless to resist the pressure of pain and the infirmity of age. Although no casual observer would think it, Thaddeus Stevens is over seventy years of age. A comely wig robs him of his hoary crown, which always hallows the head of age. His face in outline approaches the Indian Type. The square, perceptive brow, the deep-set eyes, the high cheek-bones, the broad jaw and saturnine mouth are most marked. The face in repose is stern, but not savage. The "sardonic smile" that we read so much about is a very human and kindly smile, after all. Thaddeus Stevens' inimitable sarcasm and wit seem purely intellectual gifts, flames of the head, free from all smoke of personal malice. In his acts or opinions without one emotion of ill will toward the man. He will annihilate a member in a speech, and then, clapping him on the shoulder, ask the discomfited brother to go with him to lunch. You hear of his many kindly deeds from those who know him best; of the gentle charities which blossom along his private path, of the many poor boys whom he has lifted from poverty and obscurity to give them help and a motive in life. For many years he has been a power in the nation, a leader in the House, marshaling in the van the hosts of liberty. No man perhaps would be so positively missed if he were to pass forever from the Congressional Hall. He has stood here so long, his intellect is so powerful, his personality so positive, his utterances so unique, his spirit so masterful, his memory will not pass away with his presence, nor his name with his generation.

He is one whose sayings will live long after him. His jeweled wit will be set in many a speech, and gleam in many a Congress, when the brain which gave them birth has gone back to dust. But the old lion of the House is fighting his last battles. One who has fought so long and so bravely does not like to confess that he is at last worn by Time—that even he has found a conqueror. To have lived in the world, to have been with it, and of it so long, to love it only to leave it, how hard. To a heart broken by its own burdens, death comes a healing and a consolation; but to a man who has sought to find the satisfaction of life in public spheres, whose activities have been expended on the issues of the age, while the grand problems of his time remain unsolved, and the cast victories of the future yet unaccomplished—to him death is as unwelcome as it is irremediable. Such a man has no time to die.—New York Independent.

Petroleum V. Nasby, in a recent letter, gives the life and death of the Democracy, as follows: "Oh, how true it is. We served sin faithfully, and where are we? We went to war for slavery, and slavery is dead. We fit for a Confederacy, and the Confederacy is dead. We fit for State Rites, and State Rites are dead. And democracy tied herself to all these corpses, and they have stunk her to death."

A traveler in Michigan was accosted by a little beggar girl for alms, at the depot. He put his hand in his pocket to give her a pittance, when he discovered that he had been robbed of his wallet containing several thousand dollars. He told the little girl that he had no money, whereupon a pig-pockey approached and restored the missing wallet, remarking that he could not rob a charitable man. The little beggar got an hundred dollar note.

According to a custom of the office there will be no JOURNAL issued next week. We expect to celebrate the Fourth.

The Democrats of Illinois confess themselves "dead broke," and their central committee have decided not to put a State ticket in the field this year.

H. M. Shearer the Wellsville Dentist, is again in Coudersport, and will remain only a few days. Call soon if you wish to see him. Office in the Court House.

The Normal Musical Institute advertised in our columns, will commence the session Monday July 23. All Teachers and Leaders should attend. Its success is beyond doubt.

Blacksmiths, house-cleaners, and persons who use lime and coal in general will find something of decided interest in S. H. Storrs' advertisement, to be found in another column.

Persons who wish to return or loan books belonging to the Library Association can do so by applying to Arthur B. Mann or Will. Thompson. We expect to be absent for several days and the Office will be closed.

From a report made to Congress, it appears that the Government has provided 6,075 artificial limbs to soldiers; 2,134 arms 3,784 legs, 44 hands, 9 feet and 104 other appliances; twenty three different manufacturers of artificial limbs supplied the Government, and the cost was $357,738.

Capt. J. C. JOHNSON passed a very creditable examination, and was admitted to practice in the several Courts of Potter county. He is a graduate of the Law School of the University of Michigan, of fine natural abilities and good judgment, and no matter where the "Shingle" may be hung out, we prophesy for him a successful future.

The late General Scott considered himself the ranking officer of the armies of the United States, even after General Grant was commissioned Lieutenant General. The act authorizing General Grant's appointment provided that "nothing in this contained shall be construed, in any way, to affect the rank, pay or allowance of Winfield Scott, Lieutenant General by brevet, now on the retired list of the arm."

The Call for this year's Convention is issued earlier than usual, a long campaign seeming to be the order of the day. The persons on the Vigilance Committee are respectfully requested to see that the duties are performed promptly and well. It is also expected that these committees will continue to act in such positions as the campaign may occasion. Be vigilant; while the election of General Geary is certain, the moral effect of a large majority should not be lost.

Reports from the west, and particularly from Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, indicate great loss of sheep by the recent storms and sudden changes in the atmosphere. In parts of Ohio, from twenty to thirty, in flocks of fifty sheep, perished. This was owing to the fact that the shearing had just taken place, and the sheep died from the effects of the cold. In parts of Indiana and Michigan, the heavy rains were very destructive of the flocks. It is probable that the important wool-growing interest of the States named has received such injury as will sensibly affect the community.

Breckenridge the Traitor.

The following remarks from the Richmond (Va.) Times, elicited by the report that the jury of Judge Underwood's court had found an indictment against John C. Breckenridge, illustrates the sentiments of the reconstructed or the odiousness of treason:

"We doubt if saving and accepting Gen. Lee, there is a single Confederate leader more endeared to the hearts of the Southern people than John C. Breckenridge. There is scarcely one whose influence for good among them would be greater in these troubled times. His life had been devoted to his country, and of him that great lawyer and good man, Chief Justice Taney once said he never knew a purer public man. Those qualities of heart and soul which excited the admiration of, and called forth the remark from Judge Taney, are well known, and find response in Andrew Johnson. It is this fact which excites the apprehensions of the Radicals and renders them clamorous for his outlawry and exile. They will know that in John C. Breckenridge the President would find a first friend firm supporter in the wise and statesmanlike policy he is pursuing for the restoration of the country."

The last sentence contains a cheering compliment to the President, and is well worthy the attention of loyal men.

Will the Negro Vote the "Democratic" Ticket?

The Chicago Times, sometimes, has a sly way of disclosing "Democratic" secrets, as witness the following from an editorial in its issue of June 21:

"If Charles Sumner and Jeff. Davis were in nomination for the Presidency, and the decision were to be left to the votes of Southern Negroes, the latter would beat the former twenty to one."

To this the Detroit Post pithily replies that if Charles Sumner were running for the Presidency, it would be upon the Republican ticket; and, of course, if Jefferson Davis were running for the Presidency against Sumner, it must be upon the "Democratic" ticket. In this case the Times thinks the negroes would vote the regular "Democratic" ticket. Is it in order to catch the negro vote that certain "Democratic" papers are making a hero and a martyr of Jeff. Davis, preparatory to his nomination for the presidency by their party is this the secret reason that actuates the zeal of the New York World and the sympathy of the reconstructed organ in Harrisburg for Jeff. Davis? And, in another column, the same number of the Chicago Times has a labored article lauding Jeff. Davis' innocence, and working upon the sympathies of its readers in his behalf.

The Situation in Europe.

On the principle that "no news is good news," the last intelligence from Europe, to the effect that actual hostilities had not yet been commenced in Germany, may be considered favorable. The entry of Prussian troops into Holstein has been protested against by Austria as a violation of the Gastein convention, by which it was agreed that Holstein should be held by Austria and Schleswig by Prussia, until a legitimate owner for these Duchies was found, or until the German Confederation had made other final arrangements for them. In fact Prussia wants to annex both Duchies, which would give her seaports on the German ocean and the Baltic sea. In Prussia the feeling against the war is very decided, and has been warmly expressed by petitions and remonstrances to the Government. The King, who is the most unpopular man in Prussia (with the exception of Count Bismarck, his Prime Minister—a sort of political Mephistopheles, who lures him to final destruction), has scolded the petitioners of Breslau for the "absence of devotion" in their address. From Italy there is scarcely a word about anything but preparation for the war. A parliamentary proposition to suppress all religious houses throughout Italy had been well received, and would be almost unanimously adopted. If the immense property of these houses be confiscated for benefit of the country at large it will be of much advantage to Italy.—Press

ENCOURAGEMENT TO AMERICAN TALENT.—Three Hundred Dollars has been offered by the proprietors of the Sunday-School Times of Philadelphia, to the author who will furnish the best original story for publication in the columns of their paper. As this is more than three times the amount usually paid for such an effort, the proposition will be likely to call out some of the best American Writers. In due time the readers of that excellent weekly journal will reap the benefits of this story, and we advise those who desire a good and interesting paper for the family, to send for a sample copy, which will be furnished FREE on application.

Who is to Blame?

If people grow thin and emaciated, and fairly die out by inches from the ravages of dyspepsia and indigestion, and who will pity such people, in their distress and suffering, when they neglect to avail themselves of it, only remedy yet discovered that will cure them, and which we have again and again repeated and recommended as a certain cure for dyspepsia—we refer to Coe's Dyspepsia Cure. It is certainly the greatest miracle of the age, for it cures all disorders of the stomach and bowels.
