

USEFUL AND SUGGESTIVE.
Daily Talk.
At the late Convention of the New York State Dairyman's Association Mr. L. D. Arnold read an address upon "The Future of Dairy Husbandry." In the course of which he said that at the constant rate of increase of population in the United States of 100,000 inhabitants. If we continue to consume cheese at no greater rate than at present, it will require two and one-half times the quantity we now consume to supply the annual home consumption of that day, or 450,000,000 pounds. The shipping demand must also increase. Cheese contains more than twice the nutrition, pound for pound, than meat does, while more pounds of cheese than of meat can be produced from a given quantity of food. Cheese, therefore, he thought would very naturally grow in favor with the masses, as being far the cheapest and best animal food laboring people. He estimated that in the year 1900 one people would require a billion and a half of pounds of butter for their yearly use. The question then was, Where are all these dairy products coming from? Under our present system of managing, milk dairying carried on in the warm climates of the East, and in the cold climates of the West, it is not profitable. Dairying must be excluded from the South. But he thought the demands of the year 1900 would be easily met by the people of that day, and have dairy lands to spare after that. He said the future of dairy husbandry in the United States hangs upon nothing so much as upon the quality of the goods to be brought into the markets. He would hold. Efforts at improvement must be constant, unremitting from year to year. If we would rise higher, we must strive harder to improve in our art. Science itself is called to our aid; a constant watchfulness in observing reason and calculation between dairymen should be more frequent and full. Organizations like the one here inaugurated are among the most efficient means of advancement.

Sarsaparilla

It is widely known as one of the most effective remedies ever discovered for purifying the blood. It has stood the test of years, with a constantly growing reputation, based on its intrinsic virtues, and sustained by its remarkable cures. So mild as to be safe and beneficial to children, and yet so powerful as to effectually purge out the great corruptions of the blood, such as the scrofulous and syphilitic contamination. It purifies, or diseases that have lurked in the system for years, soon yield to this powerful antidote, and disappear. Hence its wonderful cures, many of which are publicly known, of Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Ulcers, Erysipelas, and various discharges of the skin, Tumors, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Pustules, Sores, St. Anthony's Fire, Loss of Erysipelas, Tetters, Sores, Eczema, Scald Head, Ringworms, and all eruptions of the Uterus, Stomach, and Liver. It also cures other complaints, to which it would not seem especially adapted, such as Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Fits, Neuralgia, Heart Disease, Female Weakness, Debility, and Leucorrhoea, when they are manifestations of the scrofulous poisons.

It is an excellent restorer of health and strength in the Spring. By renewing the appetite and vigor of the digestive organs, it dissipates the depression and lassitude of the season. Even where no disorder appears, people feel better, and live longer for cleansing the blood. The system moves on with renewed vigor, and a new lease of life.

FIXING THE DAY.
BY HENRY DRY.
Says Patrick O'Brien to Kathleen McQuade,
"Now why won't you be kind to fix the day of our wedding?"
Says Kathleen, "Why, Pat, what a hurry you're in.
Can't you wait till the summer comes round to begin?"
"Oh, no, Kathleen," says Pat, "in all times and all seasons, the properest marriage season;
For to comfort one's self from the frost and the rain
There's nothing like weddin' in winter, 'tis plain."

KATHLEEN.
It's only protection you want from the cows,
There's a country they call the Equator, 'tis said,
That for a single young man is kept hot through the year,
Where's the use of your marriage? be off with you there."

PATRICK.
But there's also a spot not so frequently warmed,
That's also for cold maids, called the Pole, 'tis informed,
Where some maids, if all the cold can't make up her mind,
A misfortune collect called Kathleen you'll find."

KATHLEEN.
Is it threaten' you are that I'll die an old maid
Who refused for your sake Mr. Lawrence McQuade?
That I should be forgiven him—for his 'TIL he's long dead,
That he'd wait like a lamb till the summer came round."

PATRICK.
Now, it's threaten' I am that this same Mr. Larry
Is what makes you so slow in getting to marry."

KATHLEEN.
And you wish to be settled wid' me to such haste,
Doesn't prove that you're jealous of him in the last."

PATRICK.
Well, we'll not say that Kathleen will die an old maid;
KATHLEEN.
And we'll bother no more about Larry McQuade."

PATRICK.
But, Kathleen, however, shure then weddin' is the thing,
When the time that's fixed, as you say, is come, 'tis plain,
As the turf on a rock, or stones in a wall,
What, you might just as well not be married at all,
But a weddin', consider, at this side of Lent,
Would be thought on as far more surprising event;
So I'd lighten' all at this dull time of year,
Now say 'yes', for the sake of the neighbors, my dear."

KATHLEEN.
No, Patrick, we'll wed when the woods and the grass
Were a wonder of partizan green as we pass
Through the sweet cowslip meadow, and 'ry the mill,
To the chapel itself on the side of the hill;
Where the thorn that's now shining a widow's lament,
In our wedding's costume, 'll be our constant friend,
What the thrush and the blackbird join 'till the wedding."

PATRICK.
Of Patrick O'Brien and Kathleen McQuade."

KATHLEEN.
Will you really promise that, Kathleen, you promise?
KATHLEEN.
Whisper, Patrick, that I'll seal with a poplar,
—The Dark Blue.
