Folly of Cold Barns.

ing in winter.-Rural Home.

And what showing would the cost of winder feed of his animals make on the account book, if the farmer keeps one? He would find that a large portion of his feed had be-come dissipated in the frozen air of the north come dissipated in the frozen are of the north wint's, that a good portion of the hay or corn had gone to melt lee or snow and evaporate cold rain water, and that what was left after these things had been done, has harely sufficed to keep life in his beasts. For in this case philosophy or science, or book knowledge, call it what you will, is thoroughly corroborated by practice. If two beasts are fed alike, except that one is kent well stabled and the other out one is kept well stabled and the other out of doors exposed to the cold, the one thus exposed will consume just double the amount that the other will, and be in a worse condition beside. Every man who keeps a cow knows this to some extent, though he may not know the exact figures. Here we may not know the exact figures. Here we give them—they are the result of a careful experiment made by a trustworthy feeder, viz: Two lots of sheep (of five each) were selected, of equal weights and conditions. One lot was kept out of doors and unsheltered, the other kept in a close pen. The lot not under shelter ate 1,912 pounds of trusting excitations. turnips against 886 pound caten by the other lot. The gain in weight was twenty-three pounds per head in the first lot and twentyeight pounds in the second. The profit can be figured out by any man who knows what turnips and mutton are worth. Had not the feeding been abundant some of the exposed sheep would have died. And yet sheep will stand more exposure than calves or heifers, or even full grown cattle. Notwithstanding all this, every winter's day one may see young calves humped up and stiffened with cold, shaking in the keen breeze, and their owners knowing at the same time that a year's growth is frozen out of them. This comes of not figuring up profit and loss.—

How to catch a Rat.—A correspondent of the Germantown Telegraph writes the fol-lowing: "One of the pests of the farmer is rats. To keep them within endurable bounds is somewhat a difficult matter for a rat is as cunning as a fox, and as hard to catch; but there is such a thing as working strategy on it. A rat never digs a hole unless it has some protection to begin with, say a stone, a stick of wood, or anything else that makes an angle with the ground; cellar wall it likes best. If a rat is chased in a celler, or other room, it will run round by the wall, and is decidedly averse to leavng it. From this habit we have a hint how to out-general it. The common steel-trap is the best article for the purpose. Stand a barrel or box, or other article, within four inches of the wall, and in that open space get the trap, without anything to hide it. The rat, in following the wall, will go into the trap rather than go round the barrel.—When it is caught smoke the trap with a piece of burning paper, shift your barrel to another place, and set your trap as before.

MANAGEMENT OF CHILDREN.-There can, I think, be no greater disaster in the home, no greater mistake in the attempt to manage a family, then the failure of the two parents to make their authority absolutely one. The household in which, for any reason or from any cause, a conflict of authori-y exists, is the saddest of sights to one who wishes well to children. There should be earnest conference between parents con-cerning the best methods and objects; there should be perfect unanimity in the general system of management adopted by them.—
It is unspeakably better to make some mistakes in unison, than to let the minds of children get confused as to whom they shall obey. Let the father and mother with one voice, if they wish the voice of either to be respected. Appeals from one to the, other should never be permitted.—Where this is allowed, wretchedness of many kinds ensues, and management gives plade to mismanagement -J. E. Abbott, in Herald of Heath. -

BEEF TEA.—What will folks say when this other prop is knocked from under them? What is true in these days of scepticism?—Unomber's Journal says that no greater mistake exists than that beef-tea is nourishing. Some few practitioners and chemists have long been aware of the fact, and now their view is a unityped by Dr. Mancet. There is no north borent in beef-tea. Mixed with del tond, sit imparts a relish which prodigestion; and the best that can be used therewith is the beef from which it was made, reduced to a powder. In two, at least, of the London hospitals the mixture of powdered beef with the beef tea has long practiced, and there the patients get (1) abering too, that the objections to the care of beof-tea apply equally to the preport at one described as extract of meat, with the further disadvantage that the extract is always stale.

HE Egg As Food.—The relative weights of the portions of the the egg as given by Dr Thompson are: Shell and membrane, 196.9; albumen, 604.2. About one-half of the entire weight may be regarded as nitrorenous and nutritious matter. This is a recetter proportion than that of meat, which is rated at 25 to 28 per cent., showing that is food, a pound of egg is worth nearly two pounds of meat. The white of the egg, from its tendency to congulate into a hard, indigestible substance. Is not to discussed. indigestible substance, is apt to disagree with the stomachs of invalids, when the yelk may be harmless. Raw eggs are more wholesome than boiled. The longer an egg is kept the more indigestible it becomes, and kened the desire for year laid eggs. and hence the desire for new laid eggs.

OPEN WINDOWS AT NIGHT.-Very much has been written on this subject, and written unwisely; the facts are, that whoever deeps uncomfortably cool will get ill. To put a window quite hight when the mercury is at zero is an absurdity. The cooler a cleeping apartment is, the more unhealthy does it become, because cold condenses the carbonic acid formed by the breathing of AND CASSIMERS, ROPLING AND carbonic acid formed by the breathing of the sleeper. It settles near the floor and is re-breathed, and if in a very condensed form, he will die before the morning.— Hence we must be governed by circumstancon; the first thing is, you must be comfortably warm during sleep, otherwise you are not refreshed, and inflammation of the lungs may be engendered, and life destroyed within a few days. An open fireplace is suffi-cient for ordinary purposes in cold weather. When the windows are open, it is well to have them down at the top two or three inches, and up at the bottom for the same
