THE BOON OF GUESTS.—We have all of us felt how depressing is the sensation felt in a family circle after the departure of their guests. The friends who have been staying some time in your house, not only bring to the common stock their share of pleasant converse and companionship, but, in the quality of strangers, they exact a certain amount of effort for their amusement, which is better for him who gives than for the re-ipiant, and they impose that small reserve which excludes the purely personal incon-pily in strictly family intercourse have no space allotted them for discussion. It is but right to say that they who benefit most by space anotted them for discussion. It is but right to say that they who benefit most by and most gratefully acknowledge, this boon of visitors, are the young. The elders, some-times more disposed to indolence than effort, sometimes irritable at the check essentially put upon many little egotisms of daily use, and oftener than either perhaps clad to get and oftener than either perhaps glad to get back to the old groove of home discussion, unrestrained by the presence of strangers, the elders, I say, are now and then given to express a most ungracious gratitude for be-ing once again to themselves, and free to be as confidential and outspoken, and disagreeable as their hearts desire.

How TO COOR CABBAGE — We lately sat at a table where we were struck with the fine and delicate appearance of the boiled ine and delicate appearance of the boiled cabbage, which appearance of the boiled savoy cabbage. Instead of pouring vinegar on it, the mistress treated it with drawn butter. The guests admitted that it was about equal to cauliflower, and desired to know the secret of its preparation. The answer was: ''The cooking is oxceeding-ly simple. Never adopt the general pract-ite of boiling cabbage with pork—it renders it greasy, stringy and disagreeable. I boil my cabbage in clean water with a little salt, and drain it with a colander. This is the whole secret. This cabbage is nothing but the Winter Drumbend—not the Savoy. I then apply drawn butter, and the result is before you." In answer to thes question, "How is the drawn butter made?" she said: "There are different modes—I adopt the "There are different modes-I adopt the common one of working together equal parts of butter and flour till well incorporated, and then add enough hot water with stirring and heating to give it a semi-liquid or nearly liquid consistency."-Country Gen-

The kind of grass or fodder on which the cows feed also gives a pecu-liar flavor and quality to their milk. In ad-dition to these facts, it has recently been demonstrated that the most startling eonse-quence may ensue from the animals drink-ing stagnant water. Professor Law, of Cor-nell University, has examined, with a micro-scope, milk of an unusual, ropy appearance, and found it full of those fungi, or vegeta-ble organisms, that abound in stagnant wa-ter to drink, and further investigation re-venled the fact that the blood of the animals teemed with these fungi, and that the cows from which it came had only stagnant wa-ter to drink, and further investigation re-venled the fact that the blood of the animals teemed with these fungi, and that the cows from which this discovery ought to convey is very simple.
