statesman, he felt satisfied with the company he was in. Ho then introduced Professor Allen of Mansfield. Prof. Allen said it gave him pleasure to meet a body of citizens like this, and confer with them as to the political condition of the country. It showed they were intelligent beings, and were willing to hear both sides and decide rationally when to act and how to act. He was glad, too, to address a meeting presided over by an old farmer—one who had the right ring about him—one of a large class of mee who are to de-cide these questions. The paper edited by our lead-ing poet, the Eccning Post, has decided that Mr. Gree-ley would get as many votes as there were copies of the Weekly Tribere issued, and that caused him to feel the Weekly Tribere issued, and that caused him to feel the weekly to be a the day without personalities.
