will you permit me through your columns to say that for some time, a most dreadful famine has prevailed over a considerable part of Persla, so that all subsistence for man and beast has been wholly consumed, the greatest distress has provailed, and starvation to an unparalleled extent has taken place

Rev. J. H. Shedd, one of our missiona-ries there, writes: "In many places half the population had perished for want of food. n the city of Shirar and vicinity whole families have died off, and in some instances the corpses have been devoured by the urvivors. Thousands more must die, unless relieved from abroad. "In the city of Ispahan 14,000 are offi-ially reported as having died of starvation. Among the pastoral tribes, numbering over million, the direst miseries have been experienced. The pastures have dried up; the locks and herds, have perished; their dependence for food is gone." These are not exaggerated statements .--For months the most reliable accounts have been received. And ought not the people in this highly favored land to unite in send.

Curious Things About Dreams.

Is it not a curious fact, for example, that dreams are all the croations of our own minds-that we ourselves originate the forms and faces that look on us, and perhaps ter-ify us-that we think the thoughts that others seem to speak with their lips-that we and no others are the others of the comedy that is acted before us, or of the terrible tragedy in which we ourselves are tha only sufferers? There is another curious thing about our dreams, and that is the short period of time in which they occur. This has been often measured-by noting, for example, the hour or minute when one has fallen asleep, lreamed a long dream, and awoke. Many remarkable instances of this have been given. I shall add to these one from my own experience. Very late one night, when wearied in body and mind. I was dictating to a friend what required to be sent to press carly next morning, I spoke a sentence and suddenly fell asleep. 1 I dreamed a very long and complicated tream and then I awoke, feeling quite rarreshed, but for a momoni utterly confused as for where I was or what I had been doing Recovering myself.

I had been doing. Recovering myself, I began to apologize to my friend for having so long detained him at that hour of night, expressing the hope that he had been able to employ himself profitably in preparing his college exercises, when, at last, turning round—for he had been writing with his back to me-he asked me, with an express ion of wonder and almost alarm, if I felt unwell; or what did I mean? I wondered waking. This may account for a fact often noticed by men recovered from drowning, that just before becoming unconscious their whole life seemed to suddenly pass before them like a panorama, and time was nothing in the rapidity of thought There is one experience which we have years war. With reference to the Demo-acquired, I believe, from our dreams as from no other source, and that is our awful suffering through fear. Who was ever smitten when awake with such abject terror, such dread alarm, from sights of horror, from dangers dim, impalpable, mysterious, overwhelming, as in a nightnuare? We seem to encounter death in its worst forms, to combat terrible foes, to endure agonies of torment, to he persecuted by accepty savage demoniacal power-wild beasts of the des-What have ert, the hideous forms of scrpent life and of ocean life, while we are all the time utterly
