of thirty-three members, will be made up of eighteen Republicans and fifteen Democrats; while the House, consisting of one hundred members, will, according to our latest returns, stand sixty Repúblicans to forty Democrats. This gives a majority of twenty-Clure will not be of so much importance next winter as he was last. He is now a Democratic unit-nothing more.

One reason why the Democrats nominated Mr. Greeley was that they hoped the co-World openly boasted that this would be the result. But the elections already held render it reasonably certain that the next House will be Republican by a majority of nearly two-thirds. This simple fact is a strong argument against Mr. Greeley's election. The quarrel between the Executive and Conforgotten.

The Straight-out Democrats met in State Convention at Harrisburg last Wednesday. The party was well represented by delegates from the different counties, the telegraph informs us. After effecting an organization, a letter from the State Executive Committee was read stating that as the result of the October elections rendered the election of inces, and recommending the honest Democ racy of the State from taking any part in the contest of the two Republican candidates-Grant the regular, and Greeley the their already fairly expressed will. sorehead. Numerous letters from prominent Democrats throughout the State were also read, favoring the advice of the State Committee. The telegraph assures us that after a thorough discussion in secret session, the recommendation of the Committee was unanimously agreed to, and the Convention adjourned. So ends the Straight out movement in Pennsylvania. Now let us see what the ballot-box discloses next month.
