A Scene for a Study. White lay the snow over roof, over wold—
While hung the moon in the frosty sky;
And huddled sheep that crouched in the fold,
Wore the white raiment dropped from on high
But a little window, rustic and old,
Gleamed cherrily red on the wanderers nigh.

A paintor passed on his vey, that night;
"What a scone for a study," the printer said;
"Tairly glimmers that reby light.
Leicles fringe it from caves o'er head;
O meen, thou art ghostly! O world thou art whit
I'll look in at the window all warm and red," So he looked—but whatever his eyes might see
His pencil told not, his lips were dumb.
I might guess, but who would listen to me!
And the days of the painter have told their sum.
Would you know, you must weit till your soul is freahd you two meet in the world to come

Here is the study the painter wrought;
A little way off that window glows,
And the prints of the children's feet are brought.
Up to the decreasy, athwert the snows;
And the moonbeam falls like an afterthought
And silvers their pathway who now reposa-Cold shows the world and the sky round about And warm breats that raddy light between Of the painter's thought I need not doubt. For longlike his study his life had been; Ah, long time his lot was to walk without, From the one light spart, in a wintery seese. But I hope, where the white fishes freeze ud more,

I hope, where the white heres here a minor,
I hope, where the winter is over and gon.
For the cold of the night that went before
He almost forgets how he made his most;
And almost forgets how they had closed the doce,
And doomed him to welk in the world—Alone.

About a mile southest of Brandon, Vermont, there is situated a well forty-one feet deep, the water of which has the peculiarity of remaining frozen all the year round. In 1859 the owner of the property began the usual excavations for water. After passing through four feet of clay and ten feet of soil, a bed of frozen gravel, sixteen feet in thickness, was lencountered, which repidly changed to mud when exposed to heat.—Further digging penetrated another bed of clay, and finally a layer of clean gravel, in the English navy, Admiral Sir James with mouth of them men of fair abilities, were not, if we except David Paul Brown, of Philadelphia, and Chief Justice Weston, of Maine, of national reputation. Cutting Hay or Straw for Horses. A correspondent of the Toronto Gita One of the most clever and experienced African Liethodist Church, were all men of mark.

Abroad there are fewer eminent men than last year, though some who could not well be spared. Frederick Denison Maurice, the Bishops of Jamaica and St. Asaph, (Drs. Spencer and Short,) and the venerable Dean of Montreal, Rev. D. Bethune, are the most clever and experienced. Veterinary surgeons once told me "never to cut hay or straw for horses shorter than one lied my horses, and they had been much tron led with colic, or griping pains in the ston sch and bowels. A hungry ox will eat hay twice as fast as a horse; in fact, it has often been a source of wonder to me, when looking on and observing how these animals "tear in the hay," and how little chewing it gets before swallowing, why they were not often choaked with such unmanageable mouthfuls; but I nover had one who so suffered, although, like all farmers who feed roots to cattle, I have often had them choked with

Green Food for Fowls.

Mr. Wright, in his book on poultry, thus talks of the importance of green food to poultry that is confined: The last requisite in the shape of diet is a regular supply of green food. Here again, fewls kept on grass will need no attention; but for birds penned up the daily provision but for birds penned up the daily provision of it is an absolute necessity, though most beginners are ignorant of it. We well remember in our early experience how our fowls died, we could not at first tell why; and one five Buff Coohin cock, whose only favit was a strong vulture hock, wes in particular greatly regetted. An experienced friend let us into the secret, and after that we had no difficulty in keeping fowls, even where it is often said they cannot be kept in health, viz: in a vard payed with large fiar health, viz: in a yard paved with large fieg stones. The best substitute for natural gran is a large fresh turf, thrown in deliy, to each four or five head, and even in towns it is even possible to procure this by giving children a few panceevrey weak to keep up a reg-ular supply. There turf is not allowed to be taken grasa may be out or pulled, this case must be cut into green chaff with shears or a chaff machine. The latter plan is how we actually managed for years in a yard only sixty-cover by thirty-feet, divided into six pens, paying some child a few pense to bring fresh-cut greas daily, cutting it up
