

We publish this week a quarter-sheet supplement containing about a page of matter, and making the AGITATOR consist of forty columns of print.

A glance at the forty long columns of this number will convince anybody that the business men of Foggota country of many regions more remote thoroughly appreciate the fact that the Agitator is the most thrifty and enterprising citizens of the land.

The AGITATOR is now sent to all subscribers with a special address-label pasted on the outside of the wrapper. This label shows the date to which the subscriber has paid, for instance, a label reading "John Smith, 1 Jan 72," informs John that his subscription is paid up to the first day of January, 1872, and that he will receive a great favor on us by forwarding his subscription immediately.

The two-well-known Oakes Adams died at his residence in North Easton, Mass., last Thursday night.

Saturday's dispatches from New Orleans report the recent troubles in Louisiana at an end—a statement that seems almost too good to be true.

Senator Sumner was granted an absolute divorce from Alice M., his wife, last Saturday by the Superior Court of Boston.

The journal "founded by Horace Greely" devoted a portion of its editorial columns last Friday to a covert effort to justify the attempt to assassinate Gov. Kellogg of Louisiana.

The funeral of the late Chief Justice Chase took place last Saturday afternoon at St. George's chapel in New York, and the remains were then taken to Washington where further services were held yesterday.

It is announced that the President will attend the ceremony on the bench of the Supreme Court occasioned by the death of Mr. Chase until the meeting of Congress.

There is little reliable news from the Mōdow war since the terrible slaughter of our troops two weeks ago. It is said the Indians have left the Lava Beds, but the report is not credited by the authorities at Washington.

A report came from London last Sunday to the effect that the Emperor of Germany was freed upon a few days since by a priest while reviewing the Russian troops at St. Petersburg where he had been visiting the Czar.

The General Term of the Supreme Court at New York last Wednesday denied the application for a new trial made in behalf of Edward S. Stokes. Judges Fancher and Brady wrote able opinions in the case.

John Stuart Mill, a leading thinker and writer on political economy, logic, and social science, died at Avignon, France, last week. Wherever the English language is read there Mill is known and admired for the logical force and infidelity of his philosophical speculations and the simple beauty of his "economy of his style."

The Lock Haven Democrat quotes a statement of a correspondent of the Philadelphia Press to the effect that the law continuing State Treasurer Mackey in office released him from giving any security.

One of the most wonderful adventures of the age transpired last Saturday when news arrived from Captain C. F. Hall's arctic exploring expedition. The dispatches state that Captain Hall himself died in November, 1871, from an apoplectic attack.

With a few dollars in his pocket and his head full of the classics, he at once went to Washington, where another uncle was then serving as Senator. There he advertised his intention to teach a select classical school, and with little encouragement.

Another interesting incident in the life of the young lawyer was brought face to face with the question of slavery extension, and in opposition to every apparent personal interest, he at once took strong ground against the pretensions of the slave power.

Phelps, Dodge & Co. Many of our readers will need no second invitation to read carefully the statement of Messrs. Phelps, Dodge & Co. in relation to their recent difficulties with the customs department of the Government, which will be found on this page.

And we are sure that whoever reads that statement with an unprejudiced mind will agree with us that it is a calm, candid and most convincing refutation of the charges made against the firm for months past, and charges to which the action of the treasury department has lent the appearance of plausibility.

And we are sure that whoever reads that statement with an unprejudiced mind will agree with us that it is a calm, candid and most convincing refutation of the charges made against the firm for months past, and charges to which the action of the treasury department has lent the appearance of plausibility.

on a company of honorable merchants, after robbing them of over a quarter of a million of dollars. That is the whole story in a nutshell.

But we believe that cloud has already passed away, for even the officers of the Government, whose letters are referred to at the close of the statement herewith published, fully bear out the statement of the firm. The crowded state of our columns alone prevents our printing those letters.

The Late Chief Justice. But eight years have come and gone since the close of the civil war which threatened the overthrow of the Republic and resulted in the complete destruction of human slavery on this continent, and already have passed away to the Unknown Land the great statesman upon whose shoulders the destinies of the nation mainly rested during those terrible five years of gloom and carnage.

Salmon Portland Chase was born at Cornish, N. H., on the 18th of January, 1808. He came of good stock, several of his family having been distinguished in the walks of the law.

His father, John Jay, was one of the United States and Chief Justice of Vermont; another stood at the head of the bar in Portland, Me., and a third was Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the diocese of Ohio.

His father, John Jay, was one of the United States and Chief Justice of Vermont; another stood at the head of the bar in Portland, Me., and a third was Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the diocese of Ohio.

His father, John Jay, was one of the United States and Chief Justice of Vermont; another stood at the head of the bar in Portland, Me., and a third was Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the diocese of Ohio.

His father, John Jay, was one of the United States and Chief Justice of Vermont; another stood at the head of the bar in Portland, Me., and a third was Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the diocese of Ohio.

and Charles Francis Adams in 1848, and the reform on which those candidates stood was substantially his work.

Early in the next year, at the age of forty-one, he was chosen United States Senator by a coalition of the Democrats and a portion of the Free Soilers of the Ohio Legislature. He entered the Senate as an avowed Free Soil man, and when the Democrats of his State endorsed the nomination of Franklin Pierce in 1852, he acted consistently in opposition to them.

He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party. He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party.

He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party. He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party.

He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party. He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party.

He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party. He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party.

He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party. He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party.

He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party. He sought to connect with the party severing his connection with the party.

THE CASE OF PHELPS, DODGE & CO. STATEMENT RELATIVE TO THE REVENUE DEFICIT—A CLEAR AND CONCISE EXPLANATION—THE GREAT FINN FULLY SETTLED.

Messrs. Phelps, Dodge & Co. have prepared the following statement relative to the dispute between their firm and the Customs House, and after suppressing those portions which would tend to mislead, have fully preserved the few where a small benefit had accrued to the firm, put himself in communication with the Treasury.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

and the right of our present tariff law, the effect of the Government to make under its flag and under its name, and to the credit of the Government, and to the credit of the Government, and to the credit of the Government.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

and the right of our present tariff law, the effect of the Government to make under its flag and under its name, and to the credit of the Government, and to the credit of the Government, and to the credit of the Government.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

and the right of our present tariff law, the effect of the Government to make under its flag and under its name, and to the credit of the Government, and to the credit of the Government, and to the credit of the Government.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

and the right of our present tariff law, the effect of the Government to make under its flag and under its name, and to the credit of the Government, and to the credit of the Government, and to the credit of the Government.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

and the right of our present tariff law, the effect of the Government to make under its flag and under its name, and to the credit of the Government, and to the credit of the Government, and to the credit of the Government.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.

The members of the firm, on their part, were invited to defraud the Government, as well as any knowledge whatever of any irregularities in our business in connection with the duties on goods.

What followed was an invitation for two members of the firm to visit the Customs House, where they were informed that evidence had been obtained by the Treasury implicating in extensive frauds the house which they represented.