

Family Reading.
An American male parent, unto his babes said:
"Come hither, my little ones, and sit on either side of me, and I will read to you the most interesting and profitable book that I have yet seen."
In his fatherly assurance, and fond parental way, He wanted to discover what the innocents would say About a missionary book they'd heard the other day.
Full of the spirit of the Lord, all legs and curly hair,
"You'll be about the man they bang, and all the people there;
And you'll read the funny part, of how it made him swear."
Joining quickly in, cried Mamma—all writ and dimpled cheek,
"It wasn't half so funny, though, as that about the check."
"The somebody, though, cause he was so green, I speak."
"But the thing I liked the bestest," Alonso piped out,
"Was how somebody yanked away, and won't come back." And took somebody's wife with him upon a railroad train."
"When you wasn't talking, 'Lorenzo,' came swift from Mamma's side,
"When papa read about a girl who took her only child,
And wreat a baby up in it, and left it in a hall."
"O, I want 'em!" trilled Alonso, dismayed to be outdone.
"I'm going to learn to read myself; and you can have the book."
And I'll read 'em!" Personal, and never left you one!"
The American male parent, his hair across on end;
On the floor an infant form he did reverse and bend,
And with their little mouths straightway made dismal howls ascend.

GRAINS OF GOLD.

Trifles make perfection, but perfection is no trifle.
Not to "improve the occasion" merely, but to know the occasion to improve, this is the wisest wisdom.
He who cannot abide the storm without flinching, lies down by the wayside to be overlooked or forgotten.
Value the friendship of him who stands by you in the storm; swarms of insects will straggle you in the sunshine.
Watch the enemy is after you. His lurking unseen along your path. Keep your shield with you, for you know not when his blows will fall.
It has been said that the darkest day in any man's career is that wherein he fancies there is some easier way of getting a dollar than by squarely earning it.
Christ's teaching was like the light from a star, which comes down to us and causes us to gaze up all that line of light to the bright and distant orb whence it comes.
The dominion of fleshly lusts stupefies the understanding. No man who is under the control of his appetite can be either wise or good.
They who doubt the truth of religion because they can find no Christians who are perfect, might as well deny the existence of the sun because it is not always noon-day.
God tells us to bear our burdens every day, and when the evening of life does that the difficulties that appear to grow upon us as we faced them, at last smiled upon us.
The most awful judgment which God can send upon sinners is to let them alone in their sins; at the thought of this they ought to fear and tremble, for it will make their doom certain.
Not to him who sets out in the morning with resolution and gallantry, but to him who holds out all the evening of life does the promise apply, "He that endureth to the end shall be saved." Never think it is time to die; you are called for the Lord leaves us till he have done our work, and never sends us away without a word of blessing, and if we hold fast by him.
Men must not only pray that God would help them, but they must make an effort to help themselves; God answers prayers in such a way as to encourage the performance of duty, not the neglect of it.
It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after your own; but the great man is who, in the midst of a crowd, keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.
The most firm and stable earthly structures are but temporary, and the most enduring earthly possessions come to an end.
No one therefore should look to them as his chief good, or trust in them for happiness.
He who knows the character pretty much as under circumstances a vessel, and whether they speed us on the way or our wishes or retard our progress, their power is not the less important because imperceptible.
If you cannot be a great river, bearing great vessels of blessings to the world, you can be a little spring by the dusty wayside of life, singing merrily all day and all night, and giving a cup of cold water to every weary, thirsty one who passes.
No one is so happy as a real Christian, none so rational, no one so amiable.
How little vanity does he feel, though he believes himself united to God! How far is he from objecting when he ranks himself with the worms of the earth.
Many a man's days deceive him, they pass away like a shadow by moonshine, which appears bright when the longest is longest.
You may not have but half a day to live, when you think that you have not lived half your days.
The man who attempts to bring down and depreciate those who are above him, does not thereby elevate himself. He rather sinks himself, while those whom he thus depreciates are rather benefited than injured by the slanders of one so base.
There are cases in which a man would be advised not to have his name imposed upon.
There is a confidence necessary to human intercourse, and without which men are more injured by the longest of names than they could be by the perjury of others.
God's word is like God's world—varied, very rich, very beautiful. You never know when you have exhausted all its secrets.
The Bible, like nature, has something for every class of mind. Look at the Bible in a new light, and straitway you see some new charm.
Despair is a sin exceedingly vile and contemptible; it is a word of eternal reproach, dishonor and confusion; it declares the devils a conqueror, when the longest is longest, can be done to Christ than for a soul to resist, before all the world, the devil a crowned conqueror.
Heap all the sweetest contentments and most desirable enjoyments of this world upon a man, they will not make him a Christian; heap them upon a Christian they will not make him a better Christian; many a one hath been made worse by the good things of this world, and where is the Christian that hath been bettered by them?
As we know not the time of our death, and no man can reveal it to us, duty and interest require that we should so live as to be always ready. To those who are diseased and after a lingering illness, no society shall be absent from the body, "than we shall be present with the Lord," beholding his glory and rejoicing in the fullness of his love.
Dealers in strong drinks find the curses they import often return tenfold into their own bosoms. Very many children of those who traffic in liquid death and distilled damnation become inebriated, blighted souls, and find a drunkard's grave! Fathers, mothers, sons and daughters all find a common hall of weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth!
When the physicians told Theotimus that except he abstained from drunkenness, un-cleanness, &c., he would lose his eyes, his heart was so wedded to his sin that he answered, "Then farewell sweet light." He had rather lose his eyes than leave his sin.
So a man bewitched with sin that he God, Christ, heaven and his own soul than part with it.
It is through much tribulation that Christians must enter the kingdom of God, and they should not be anxious. Let them be found at all times in the path of duty, and when trials come they may expect to be prepared for them. God will suffer an un-believer to come upon them, except those which glory and our highest good.
Of many a young man to-day whose life is irregular, if not flagrantly criminal, good friends are saying, "Oh, he is only sowing his wild oats." Sowing his wild oats, indeed, but not in the sense intended, not a sense of burying them, but sowing them west. It is false, parents, that such a youth has rich promise in it. It is false, young men, that you can transgress great moral laws and form vicious habits, and one day at manhood cast them off as easily as you will wear your dress. The law that as you will read it is manhood that you sow in youth; that and not something else.
