It is reported that the leprosy has been introduced into San Francisco from the Sandwich Islands. d Talleyrand's Memoirs, it is now said, are not to be published at present, his will forbidding their publication before 1888. The first volume of the newly-revised American Cyclopædia will be published by the Appletous this month, by subscription. The number of feet of lumber cut on the tupper Mississippi last season was 127,000,000, mostly in Minneapolis and St. An-

Mr. Edward Van Reuth's historical paint ing, "The Burial of a Martyr," is now on exhibition in Baltimore, and is described as a work of art of a high order. Other places might profitably follow this example of Bristol, England; a society has been formed in that city to suppress profane and indecent language in the streets. It is stated in the English papers that Mr. Hepworth Dixon will shortly leave for America, to deliver a course of lectures upon the Spanish Republic and the new German Empire. A marble statue of Franklin, by Powers, was unveiled in New Orleans, on Wednesday, June 18th. It was presented to the city by Mr. C. A. Weed, and is erected in front of the City Hall.

Very great prices were paid for the Turner engravings at a London auction, lately, The plates of the "Liber Studorium" alone, brought about $100,000. A set of them comprised seventy-one plates, and they brought from $1,000 to $4,000 each set. Dr. Oswald Herr, of Zurich has published a paper "On Flax Culture in Pre-Historic Times." He finds the original home of the flax to be along the shores of the Mediterranean. It can be shown that the plant was cultivated in Egypt five thousand years

Works are now being erected in Pitts-burgh to manufacture pressed bricks, with enamelled facings. The enamel is made of various colors to suit the tastes of architects or builders, and is impervious to water or acids, having a surface that can be cleaned like lelass.

The original star spangled banner which streamed above the ramparts of Fort Mc-Henry, in 1814, and inspired Francis Scott Key to compose the famous national song, has been received as a precious historical relic at the navy yard at Charlestown. It is full of rents and stains, and considered the more sacred in consequence of its honorably dilapidated condition.

Owen Pike, in his forthcoming "History of Crime in England," will try to show that not only have crimes of violence and rapine diminished with the progress of civilization, but also the meaner and more crafty crimes such as theft, forgery, and poisoning. Mr. Pike's first volume comes down to the end of the fifteenth century, and the reign of Henry VII.

The death is announced of John Camden Hotten, the enterprising London publisher. He did much by issuing cheap editions of standard authors, both of Europe and America, to disseminate knowledge among all classes. But those on this side of the water who believe in an international copyright law, have disapproved of his course, regarding it as literary theft of our best authors. England regards some of our own publishers in the same light.

It would be well to head, at this season, the following general statistics given by Charles Dickens in one of his papers in All the Year Round. "The first Napoleon caused more deaths than all the earthquakes ed more deaths than all the earthquakes since the days of Noah; the cupidity of ship-owners and the supineness of sailors have lost more ships and lives than all the storms that ever blew; the filthy state of our towns sends more souls to Hades than all put together. "Humbug" is said to be a corruption of the Irish words uim bog, pronounced combug, signifying soft copper, or pewter, or brass, or worthless money, such as was made by James II., at the Dublin mint,—twenty shillings of which were worth only two pence sterling. At first applied to worthless coin, the word became the general title of anything false or counterfeit. Others think the word originated in London, being derived from Hamburg on the Elbe, because during the continental wars this city was the nucleus of false rumors and reports.

A writer in St. Paul's Magazine, describing the beauty of the human foot says: "We have often thought, considering how much we lose by shoes and how little we gain, that it is a thousand pities women do not bring in sandals,—not the foolish, ribboned manuse of the last contury, but the real Greek pumps of the last century, but the real Greek sandal. Without the hard and deformed shoe, every muscle of the foot is in motion, and visible at every step; it is quite wonderful how pretty the feet appear, even when not very small. In reality, we lose nearly as much by the shoe as the face loses by a

Messrs. J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia, announce that they have commenced the issue of an entirely new edition of the Works of William H. Prescott, edited by John Foster Kirk, and to be completed in fifteen monthly volumes. This edition of Mr. Prescott's works is to be printed from new atcreetype plates, and will embrace all the author's corrections, notes, and additions,—both those contained in the successive English editions published during the later years of his life, and those left by him in manuscript, the latter having, by the in manuscript, the latter having, by the purchase of the interests of the heirs of Mr. Prescott, passed into the possession of the publishers. It is to be sold by agents. A curious fact has been ascertained in re-

A curious fact has been ascertained in regard to the development of the frog in Guadeloupe. It is well known that the eggs of frogs and toads generally give birth to fadpoles, which, after undergoing various changes in the water, become transformed into frogs. For this become transformed changes in the water, become transformed into frogs. For this, however, water is necessary, and as Guadeloupe is almost destitute of this medium, it is found that the change takes place within the egg, and that the animal at birth is a fully develoyed frog. A similar condition to this has already been observed in regard to various species of salamander, which, while usually inhabiting water in the larvæ state, sometimes become completely formed in the egg.

In the Churchman's Shilling Magazine the following incident is related. The first idea following incident is related. The first idea of "The Christian Year" seems to have been suggested to Mr. Keble by an incident narrated by Mr. Parker, of Oxford, son of the eminent publisher of the first edition of the work. The late Mr. Keble, on entering the shop in Broad street one morning, saw at the top of a small staircase which led to a little gallery filled with bookshelves a work entitled "L'Annee Chretienne," in twelve volumes, and at once asked Mr. Parker to allow him to examine it. A short time afallow him to examine it. A short time after "The Caristian Year" appeared, and there can be little doubt that the author took his title from the old French devotional

The Spectator says that the octopus in the aquarium at Brighton has curiously vindicated that representation of its powers by Victor Hugo, which was so often denounced as exaggerated. Mr. Charles Collette, an actor in the theatre at Brighton, who had learned the art of snake charming in India, undertook to charm the octopus, and suc. undertook to charm the octopus, and succeeded so far as to bring him to the surface of the water, and make the octopus follow him round the tank. But when he bent this method of informing you, confidentially, that he will sist a positive embrace, and catching Mr. Collecte in his arms, is drew him into the tank, where a struggle ensued, and Mr. Collette was with difficulty extracted by Mr. Smith and other bystanders.
