Mrs. Addle was fat—adipose,
With a (Tennyson's) tip-tilted nose;
And ahe came into court
With a sort of cavort,
And a countanance red as a rose. Her duck of a bonnet was small, Tipped forward till ready to fall; Like the Mother Goose Humpty, Of patronymic Dumpty, Who couldn't stay up on the wall.

She came into court, and she sat In a chair—it was full (she was fat), — With a stare at the miners, And pennya. Hugas And penny-a-liners, And lawyers, and judge, and all that. She stared with the smillingest stare
At the hoodlums surrounding her there;
And ev'ry one said,
By the toss of her head,
She d discount the sweet Mrs. Fair. One miner of old '49
Who'd panned out the bloom of his mine
In a high-colored nose, In a high-colored nose, Said: "If she ain't a rose, Just say I ain't much on opine."

The Sheriff cried 'Silence I' The court Inquired if she'd argue a tort. Her counsel said 'Yes,' That she wanted redress, And have it she certainly ort. The man that had married her couldn't, Or didn't, or hadn't, or wouldn't Support the petitioner, Clothe, feed, nor physician her; And stey with him longer she shouldn't.

He hadn't been light in ill-treatin' her,
But possibly never had beaten her.
(Here old 4)
To his 'pard' did opine,
"He might have as easily eaten her"). These points were all read in rotation—
A form of super-c-regation—
And no one replying,
No any denying,
She won her Decree like tarnation.

The Addle went out as she entered,
The object where all eyes were contred,
As gushing a damsel,
Restored to be Mam'selle,
As ever to wedlock dissenter'd.

No word had the court of hen-peck heard, Nor how the poor man had been checkered; But the law took its course In a handy divorce, And you cannot go back on the record. It's getting as common as lying.
This slipping the noose without trying;
And marriages soon
May revolve with the moon,
And keep all the furniture flying.

When bad, there is nothing untruer Than some styles of masculine woosr; But usually there Is reason to swear That the done's rather worse than the doer.

SOMETHING FOR SOBER-SIDES.

Old Judge W——, of ——, in the Old Dominion, is a character. He was frequently lawyer, legislator, judge, and leading politician among the old-time Whigs, of blessed memory; but, alas! like them, his glory has departed, and, like many others of his confreres, has gone "where the woodbine twineth." Notwithstanding the loss of property, and the too free use of "apple jack," he maintained the dignity of ex-judge, dressed neatly, carried a gold headed caue, and when he had taken more than his usual allowance of the favorito beverage, he was very pious, at such times, always, attending church, and sitting near the stand as crectly as circumstances would admit, and responding fervently, On one occasion a Baptist brother was on one occasion a Baptist brother was holding forth, with energy and unction, on the evils of the times, and in one of his flights exclaimed, "show me a drunkard!" The Judgo, rising to his feet, and unsteadily balancing himself on his cane, said very solemply:

"Here I am, Sir, here I am!"

The Fider though a good deal, nonpluss-

The Elder, though a good deal nonplussed by the unexpected response, managed to go on with his discourse, and soon warming to his work again, called out—"Show me a hypocrite! Show me a hypocrite! Show me a hypocrite!" Judge W again arose, and reaching forward across a seat which intervened touched Dengon D— on his shoulder with his cane and said:

"Dencon D, why don't you respond,
Sir? Why don't you respond? I did when they called me?"

In crossing the plains in 1852, Tommy Dod was gobbled up by the Goshoot Indians, and some months remained a captive among and some months remained a captive among them. He says among other plunder obtained by the Indians when they took his train, was a hand organ which an adventurous Italian was bringing out to Calafornia. They piled bacon around the old Italian and fried him in it; but his organ they carried away with them, as the sounds it gave out when the crank was turned delighted their murding hearts. ed their murdering hearts. For it is true, as Congreve says in the opening lines to his tragedy of the Mourning Bride, that Music hath charms to soothe the sayage breast, To soften rocks, or bend the knotted oak.

The organ was a big thing among the Indians after they had reached their village. The chief had a man to sit in front of his The chief had a man to sit in front of his hut and grind it every night. It was set to play "Yankee Doodle," and "Yankee Doodle" it played every night, week in and week out, without "variation." One night in fooling with the "machine," the Indian grinder shifted the stop, and when he resumed the crank out came "Pop Goes the Weasel." The old chief listened a moment, and supposing the mechine was credited. and supposing the machine was spoiled, seized his tomahawk, leaped from the door of his hut, and with a flerce yell, brained the discoverer of the new tune upon the

Many years ago, Robert Treat Paine (father of the poet,) was one of the Judges of the Massachusetts Supreme Court. He was very old, and the bar desired him to retire from the bench; so they appointed Harrison Gray Otis, who was very polite and accomplished, to go and see the Judge and talk to him on the subject. He suggested to the Judge that it must be a very great inconvenience to him to have to leave home so often and so long. so often and so long.

The other day, while he was standing by the side of the house, the sun suddenly came out bright and warm, and Bull began gradually to ascend. He stopped at the line of the sill of the second story window and hung there, suspended in space, until a thunder storm happened to come up, which cooled the atmosphere, and then Mr. Bull slowly descended. Now he has a graduated scale marked on the gable end of the dwelling, and whenever Mrs. Bull wants to know how warm it is, she ties flat irons to Henry's legs to hold him down, and walks him around to the gable end and cuts him loose and lets him rise to eighty or night.
