

PAINTED POST IRON WORKS.

ESTABLISHED IN 1840.

PAINTED POST, N. Y.

My dear Sir,
I saw her last night, at a party,
The elegant pair, looking remarkably pretty,
For a widow who was suffering sorrow,
Yet I know she was suffering sorrow,
Too deep for the tongue to express,
Or why she should be chosen to be loved,
So much from the language of dress!

Her shawl was as white as a night,
And her gloves were as dark as her shawl,
And her jewelry flashed in the light,
Were as black as a funeral veil,
Her robe had the hue of the light,
(How nicely it fitted her shape!)
And the grief that was haunting her breast,
Boded her in billows of escape.

What tears of virtuous woe,
That she might have sunk her face,
Were kindly permitted to flow,
With even her fan in the play,
Had quite a lugubrious scope,
And seemed to be waving over
The ghost of the Angel of Hope.

Yet as rich as the robe of a queen,
Was the somber apparel she wore,
I'm certain I never had seen
Such a magnificent array before;
And I certainly help thinking the beauty,
In mourning the lowest and the best,
Was doing her colossal duty,
Entirely regardless of cost.

One would say such devotion
Performed at no vast expense,
Detested an excess of emotion,
That really was something immense:
And yet, I viewed, at my leisure,
Those tokens of tender, robust measure,
I thought, it was easier to measure,
The sorrow that goes by the yard.

Ah, grief is a curious passion;
And you, my dear, are so easily afraid,
The very next phase of the fashion,
Will find it being so hard to lead,
Though dark are the shadows of grief,
The morning will bring broken relief,
Half tints will be broken relief,
Till joy shall be broken relief!

Oh, well!—I were able to quarrel
With fashion, or make it any do;
And so I conclude with a moral,
That I'm not a philosopher,
When masses come lamely out,
In dress that is safe, and in style,
And the sorrow is hid, no doubt,
That wears in a similar way.

RELIGIOUS MATTERS.

Success is the world's criterion of merit; fidelity is God's.

Forgiveness is the way by which every saved soul enters heaven.

He is wise who mixes reflective and meditative piety with efforts to do good and to communicate.

All ideas of heaven in which forgiveness has not a place, are castles in the air and vain fancies.

Blessed are they who see the day of glory; but more blessed are they who contribute to its approach.

Severe discipline, if the heart be right, tends to develop piety, richness, and symmetry of Christian character.

Rev. Dr. Lyman, rector of Trinity church in San Francisco, has accepted the assistant Bishopric of the Diocese of North Carolina, to which he was elected last June. The departure of Dr. Lyman from this Diocese will be a severe loss.

This is the way the Congregational ministers are paid in Vermont. Only about one third of the churches pay the minister promptly; sixty-five pay from $400 to $600; thirty-eight pay $1,000 or more; thirteen not more than $500; twenty-five $600 or less; forty-three less than $500.

But there is really so little reason why bodies having the same faith and the same form of church order and discipline should continue to be separate and even rivals, that we cannot doubt that union will triumph over all the obstacles that now postpone it. The grounds of attachment are so much more weighty than anything that can be urged in opposition, but one result is possible.—Examiner and Chronicle.

A San Francisco correspondent of the Christian Intelligencer writes: "I frequently visit the Chinese chapel under the care of the faithful missionaries, Rev. Messrs. Tompkins and Condit, and this evening witnessed the baptism of eleven Chinese young men. Both sacraments were administered, the hosts were crowded, and the meeting was one of thrilling interest. It is remarkable that after a trial of more than twenty years an occasion like this should have happened in the little mission, coming as if by work of a few weeks."

The Foreign Committee of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States announced that since the day of prayer for an increased supply of missionaries, in December last, a missionary object had been raised up and appointed for Japan, five young men in the Theological Seminary in Wisconsin have expressed an earnest desire to be sent to the mission, and the missionaries and four deacons in Haiti, colored men, also, in seminaries and elsewhere, the response comes.—Here and There.

In regard to the Baptist missions in Europe, the chapel in Paris, France, it is hoped will be completed this year. The present number of members in the church is estimated during the year 7. Total number of members in France, so far as reported, 413. In Germany the work has gone forward, and in former years. In Sweden there are 221 churches; baptized last year 677; members 4,412. Only 10 churches have been closed. The work in Spain and Greece has been hindered by various obstacles, and makes little progress. The total of baptisms in all the missions of the United States last year was 4,319. Total of members, allowing 1,300 for Africa, not less than 57,512.

On the first Sunday after Trinity the experiment was tried of mutual intercommunion in all the churches of London for the holidays of that city. It developed a unity of action by different religious bodies upon a specifically religious matter, which was quite remarkable. All sorts and conditions of men—Christians, Jews, and possibly heathens circulated each other's contributions to the hospital fund. The Queen sent two princes to represent her at St. Paul's, in London; the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Westminster issued a commendatory circular letter upon the subject, which was read before all the Roman Catholic congregations; and the Jews pledged large contributions on the day before, at their services.

Making all due allowance for the anxiety of affection to pay its tribute to the memory of the deceased, and remembering, too, that from large circles of relatives and friends there may naturally be a very great aggregate of these memorials, common-sense dictates that there is a point at which reverence involuntarily passes, where grief turns to protest against the very appearance of pompous parade, and religion shrinks from ostentatious fashion. We do not mean to say that the most modest funeral services, but this excessive display in public religious services, and especially over the memory of the deceased, is in many other matters of Christian life, as in the world of God furnished us with a lesson. "Let your mourning be a simple rule, men."—Christian Intelligencer.

The Chronicle says that the expelled Jesuits of Germany are rapidly arriving in this country. The Harvard states the other day brought a party of ten, and the Brooklyn reports that they brought twenty-five or thirty. The writer of the article says that "but few of them are to be permanently located here; their ultimate destination being the Far West, along the line of the Pacific Railroads. With their customary worldly foresight, Rome has discovered there a new empire, worth an effort to conquer, if only to counterbalance the terrible falling away which confronts her power, in the Eastern hemisphere. These expelled Jesuits, who are now wandering through the streets of New York, with all the familiarity of people who are the man or born, are but the pioneers, or the sappers and miners, of the cohorts who are to follow from time to time."

The following sensible bit of writing we take from the Baptist Examiner and Chronicle, apropos of a late occurrence in Chicago: "Is it bigotry? Rev. Arthur Brooks had a visitation from his Bishop. At the canonization service, instead of following the Rubric, and inviting to the table all such as he religiously and devoutly respected, he gave a general invitation to all Christians. The Bishop shook his head, mildly rebuked the rector for his departure from the ordinary rule, and received from the Union Press the usual measure of condemnation for enforcing the rules of the Church. Especially, it is said, he rebuked him because that in the Rubric, if nothing was to be gained by a departure from the rules of the Church, why not keep them? When Mr. Brooks was ordained he held at the canonization and received in the most solemn form the Bible, the Prayer Book, the Rubric, and the Canons of the Church. If he had changed his opinion on discipline, doctrine, or service, the honest way would have been to give back his ordination and pledge, instead of violating the laws of his church."
