October. BY GEORGE W. SEARS. There comes a month in the weary year-A month of leisure and healthful rest; When the ripe leaves fall, and the air is clear; October; the brown; the crisp, the bleat.

My life has little enough of bliss; I drag the days of the oddieleren, Counting the time that shall lead to this— The month that opens the hunter's heaven.

And oh t for the mornings orisp and white, With the sweep of the hounds upon the track; The back-roofed cabin, the camp-fire's light, The break of the deer and the rifle's crack.

Do you call this trifling? I tell you, friend, A life in the forest is past all praise, Give me a dozen such months on end-You may take my balance of years and days.

For brick and mortar breed flith and crime, And a pulse of evil that throbs and beats; And men grow withered before their prime With the curse paved in on the lanes and street

And lungs are choked, and shoulders are bowed In the smothering reek of mill and mine; And death stalks in on the struggling crowd, But He skuns the shadow of osk and pine.

And of all to which the memory clings, There is naught so sweet as the sunny spots Where our shariles stood by the crystal springs, The vanished hounds, and the lucky shots. —The Aldine.

The Old Man's Darling.

Bary sat in her little chamber dreaming bright dreams to be realized in the future. Her fortune was made! What did it matter now if there had been poverty and priva-tion in the past! Was not the future bright with wealth and splendor? "I shall have diamonds and laces and so-ciety to my hearth content " she mused ciety to my heart's content," she mused, gazing from her window in the east, where the round rising moon looked softly into her glittering eyes. "I shall purchase them dearly, perhaps, but I shall be an 'eld man's darling;' Colonel Leslie said so to-night as he placed the soal of our betrothal upon my finger. It is true that there is a work my finger. It is true that there is a great disparity of years between us, but I am sat-isfied with the contract I have made; I shall be 'clothed in purple and fine linen every day,' and if I should not be happy there will be no one to blame but myself. I shall no longer be dependent on those who begrudge me even the morsel I eat." The wedding was a quiet one. The vilage had never seen a lovelier bride nor a happier groom, and when after a month's he couple took possession of their luxuriant home Margary again congratulated herself on the brilliancy of her fortune.

I mar-ried you because I was dazzled by those vis-ions of splendor which you placed before my eyes, and I sighed for them as those who travel in the sandy deserts thirst for water. Fashion and society are my idols, and dis-connected from them I would not turn over my hand to live another hour. I shall not my hand to live another hour, I shall not give them up without a struggle, you may rest assured, but the victory is not always to the strong. Good night" she added, turning from him and leaving the room with the air of an annurage with the air of an empress. Colonel Leslie, stunned and mortified by her confession, buried his face in his hands, This was the bitter ending of his pleasant dream—this cold, calculating woman, who presided over his home. 'She shall have her own way," he suddenly, stoically resolved. "If she married me, as she says, for my wealth, she shall not be cheated in the bargain. She shall enjoy her freedom unmolested while I live, and my wishes shall hereafter remain untold." my wisness shall noreatter remain uniold. Two-four years passed away, and then the end of it all came. Margery was sit-ting alone in her elegant drawing room. whence an hundred guests had just depart ed, when Colonel Leslie entered hastily and drew a chair to her side. Method of Detecting Mineral Poisons.

Many years ago Professor Edmund Davy of Dablin, devised a "simple electro-meta od of ascertaining the presence of different metals-applied to detect minute quantities of metallic poisons," which is well worth recalling to notice. He employed a voltric arrangement of small slips of zinc and platina placed in contact, and forming a gal-vanic circuit with the interposed fluid sus he suspended crab within it, and darted back again to the ledge of rock on which he had been lying in ambush. There he held on, with the crab firmly pressed bepected to contrin the poisonous metal. In the action thereby set up the poison was deposited in the form of crystals on the negatween his body and the stonework. As this was not what I wished, I directed Cosham, tive surface of the clips of metal. Arsenic could be detected if only the hundredth my assistant, to gently try to pull the bait away from him. Young Stock in Fall and Winter.

The time has arrived when young stock is to be seen to. Winter will soon be here, and the long cold rains and wet shows of and the long cold rains and wet grows of autumn are impending. Are we going to keep out, as is so much the case, our tegs, calves and young colds, till the snow forces them to shelter? Quite likely, the most of us. And what will be the result? It will be not only a lessening of the flesh, but a check in the growth, which can never be remedied. On this point we are very heed-less—many of us ignorant. We act as though we did not know what is lost in the growth of a young animal is a loss to the growth of a young animal is a loss to the mature cow, horse or sheep or any other stock. And if left out now in the rains and show with short feed, frozen and faded to-ward the last, this will surely, and the a con-siderable extent, be the case. The fields also are hurt by being denuded, and the evil-thus has a twofold hold upon the future. It should be remembered—but it is not generally-that young stock dropped in the spring has never seen winter, so that the se-verity of the weather will fall all the heav-ier upon the tender and uninured animals. They need early shelter, to be let out again if the weather is favorable and the feed If the weather is favorable and the feed plently. November, in our 44th degree of latitude, should see them housed permanent-ly. Better feed early, so that when the win-ter really sets in, the young stock is in a healthy; hearty condition, growing uncheck-ed, while it is housed during both the late fall and winter.

A shed will answer for the calves and the oung sheep, each kept separate. Let there be feeding racks along the sides—this for fall; and I also prefer it for winter; but let it be made tight and warm, with warm, dry bedding, not neglecting to ventilate aufibedding, not neglecting to ventilate suffi-ciently, though no snows should be suffered to blow in. Thus housed, and not crowd-ed, the little company will enjoy it, and con-tinue to thrive uninterruptedly if the right feed be given. The same will do pretty much for the three, the tegs, the calves and the colts, and that is, in effect, a continua-tion of the grass or summer feed, dried grass, hay dried when green and tender. Noth-ing is better than aftermath for this young ing is better than attermath for this young stock, unless it is early-out clover. The two together we have found to work as well as mything. The substance and effect are about the same. It is held thot such a feed is too loosening the bowels. We have not found it so; and I have never seen it so. It is more so than grass itself, grass advanced in its growth, which has a less influence, in this direction than the more tender growth, such as pasture generally furnishes. No one would object to have pasture continued du-ring the winter if this could be, as is the case in some parts on the country, where cattle and sheep subsist on grass the year round. But some people are hard to conrince; they are those that come in last to dopt the unprovements; and thus they refuse benefits which others have reaped in the meantime.

It is gratifying to see the advance young stock will make during the winter if prop-erly fed and taken care of. They will come out strong, active, and greatly grown. Such
