

Literary Notices.

BOOKS sent to us for a Notice, will be duly attended to. Those from publishers in Philadelphia, New York, &c., may be left at our Philadelphia Office, 27 South 10th St., below Chestnut, in care of Joseph M. Wilson, Esq.

The Church or Christ. In its Idea, Attributes, and Ministry. With a particular reference to the Controversy on the subject between Romanists and Protestants. By Edward Arthur Litton. First American edition. Philadelphia: Smith & New York: Harper & Brothers. 3 vols. pp. 188, $16.

The True Idea of the Church has been a subject of dispute for ages. Protestants have their various shades of difference, some of which are of much importance, and which prevent a cordial fraternal union, and interfere with a harmonious testimony against error and a vigorous co-operation in the establishing and the spread of the true religion. But the main controversy is between Protestants and Romanists.

Is the Church a visible Society, with her visible head, her external unity, her priesthood, and her sacrifices? or is she a society of true believers, where the pure word of God is preached, and the sacraments are rightly administered? If the former is the true idea, Romanism has decidedly the advantage; and the giddy should cling to her communion, and work for her purification; but if the latter is the proper description of the Bride of Christ, then all good men should separate themselves from Rome, as from an apostacy, protesting against her corruption, and enjoy the simple rites, and spiritual worship, and holy communion of the faithful in Christ Jesus.

This question must, manifestly, be determined by Scripture. We must search, also, for the Church of Christ, the New Dispensation, in the New Testament Scriptures. That which was old; the Mosaic order, the Temple and its priests and sacrifices, vanished away. When the fulness of time had come, Christ introduced his kingdom; and his apostles expounded his doctrines, and organized his followers. We look, then, in the society called together and established under the ministration of the Spirit, for the true idea of the Church.

The work of Mr. Litton is able, and highly instructive, as against Romanists, and their cousins, the Papalites and High Churchmen. To distinguish between Presbytery and Independence, and their various modifications, was not the author's object; but the great question being settled, as to the Romanist and their imitators, the differences among evangelical Protestants may be com- placently endured.

We commend the work to a careful reading. LATE N. G. A. M. L. — Explorations and Discoveries during four years' wandering in the wilds of South-Western Africa. By Charles John Anderson. With numerous illustrations, representing sporting adventures, subjects of natural history, devices for trapping animals, &c. 12mo., pp. 55. New York: Harper & Brothers, Fifth Avenue.

Africa continues to be the favorite field of daring explorers, and adventurous sportmen. The press literally teems with their narratives; and with scarcely an exception, they have been valuable helps in portraying the features of the interior of that vast continent. This volume contains the narrative of explorations and discoveries during four years in the wilds of South-Western Africa, between the years 1850 and 1854. In the first journey, the region of the Damara, (formerly all but unknown,) and of the Ovambo, till now a terra incognita, were explored. In the second journey, the Lake Ngami was reached, and a way has been discovered by which commerce and civilization may eventually reach these regions. This book is less philosophical in its tone than the valuable one which Dr. Wilson lately published on Western Africa; but it is filled with stirring scenes of adventure, with narratives of hair-breadth escapes and descriptions of strange scenes, which will be quite new to most readers. As a work of travel, it is far more exciting than the journals of Denham and Clapperton, while it is, no doubt, as truthful. We doubt not that it will be read with as much avidity as the story of Gordon Cumming, while it is much more literary and valuable in so far as the enlargement of our knowledge is concerned.

ESTIMATE OF METHODISM, Containing that portion of Cooke's Curiosities which relates to Methodism. By Rev. W. C. Boston: Whipple & Co. 1856. pp. 417, 12mo.

This is rather a caustic treatise, provoked by petty annoyances, in the city of Salem, Mass. It is well known that Methodism is exceedingly aggressive in its spirit. It was so in its origin, and so it continues. Hence its many conflicts. If its combative ways were exhibited only against the powers of darkness, all true Christians would rejoice in it; but it does not go to the heathen with any great degree of effort, nor to lands enveloped in Popish darkness. This is well known.

This lent little volume, which is appropriately illustrated, is well suited to engage the young.

The story of the great navigator's life is told very clearly, and in an attractive manner, while the lessons which it teaches are unfolded. It is an excellent boy's book.

HIS STORY OF COLUMBUS, simplified for the Young Palms. By Sarah H. Bradford, author of "The Silver Lake Stories," "Ups and Downs," &c. 18mo., pp. 255. New York: C. Scribner, 377 12mo. pp. 224. New York: C. Scribner, Broadway, and 370 Broadway. 1857.

This is a well written, excellent book; and we wish that all the sons of toil in our land, especially in our great cities, were possessed of a copy of it. It is exactly the kind of book to suggest to operates the themes on which they should meditate; and its perusal would, we doubt not, be instrumental in saving many whose minds are given to the study of the objects described in the body of the work.

THIS BOOK IN THE WORKSHOP; or, Christianity in the Friend of Labor. By Rev. John W. McLean. 12mo., pp. 244. New York: C. Scribner, Broadway, and 370 Broadway. 1857.

This is a well written, excellent book; and we wish that all the sons of toil in our land, especially in our great cities, were possessed of a copy of it. It is exactly the kind of book to suggest to operates the themes on which they should meditate; and its perusal would, we doubt not, be instrumental in saving many whose minds are given to the study of the objects described in the body of the work.

THE BIBLE IN THE WORKSHOP; or, Christianity in the Friend of Labor. By Rev. John W. McLean. 12mo., pp. 244. New York: C. Scribner, Broadway, and 370 Broadway. 1857.

This lent little volume, which is appropriately illustrated, is well suited to engage the young.

The story of the great navigator's life is told very clearly, and in an attractive manner, while the lessons which it teaches are unfolded. It is an excellent boy's book.

NEVER MIND THE FACE; or, The Cousin's Visit. By Hetty Holroyde, author of "The Surprise," 12mo., pp. 211. New York: C. Scribner, Broadway, New York. 1857.

This lent little volume, which is appropriately illustrated, is well suited to engage the young.

The story of the great navigator's life is told very clearly, and in an attractive manner, while the lessons which it teaches are unfolded. It is an excellent boy's book.

THIS IS A CONTINUATION OF THE NARRATIVE COMPLETED IN "THE THREE GOLD DOLLS"; and we doubt not but that the number of young readers for whose amusement and instruction this little book has been prepared, will find it as attractive as they need desire.

THE ESTIMATE OF METHODISM, Containing that portion of Cooke's Curiosities which relates to Methodism. By Rev. W. C. Boston: Whipple & Co. 1856. pp. 417, 12mo.

This is rather a caustic treatise, provoked by petty annoyances, in the city of Salem, Mass.

It is well known that Methodism is exceedingly aggressive in its spirit. It was so in its origin, and so it continues. Hence its many conflicts. If its combative ways were exhibited only against the powers of darkness, all true Christians would rejoice in it; but it does not go to the heathen with any great degree of effort, nor to lands enveloped in Popish darkness. This is well known.

This lent little volume, which is appropriately illustrated, is well suited to engage the young.

The story of the great navigator's life is told very clearly, and in an attractive manner, while the lessons which it teaches are unfolded. It is an excellent boy's book.

THE BIBLE IN THE WORKSHOP; or, Christianity in the Friend of Labor. By Lewis Cheseam. 12mo., pp. 228. Philadelphia: Parry & MacMillan. 1856.

Dr. Cheseam's position in this work is, that the fortunes of Islam and those of the Church have been remarkably blunted from first to last. They cross each other's track in the patriarch's tent, in the visions of the prophets, in the creed of Mohammed, in the empires of the Saracens and Ottomans; so that in treating of Ishmael and his descendants, we necessarily follow them through the Church; for here their way lies." The relations of Ishmael to the Church, and his influence on its destinies from the days of his birth, through the patriarch to the fall of the Ottomans, are discussed by the author in a style clear and ornate, while the historical references and quotations which abound in the work, show the author to be intimately acquainted with the historical incidents connected with his subject.

BEAUMARISCH'S AND HIS TIMES. Sketches of French Society in the Eighteenth Century, from unpublished papers of Louis De Lomenie. Translated by Horace S. Edwards. 12mo., pp. 155. New York: Harper & Brothers, Franklin Square. 1857.

The True Idea of the Church has been a subject of dispute for ages. Protestants have their various shades of difference, some of which are of much importance, and which prevent a cordial fraternal union, and interfere with a harmonious testimony against error and a vigorous co-operation in the establishing and the spread of the true religion. But the main controversy is between Protestants and Romanists.

Is the Church a visible Society, with her visible head, her external unity, her priesthood, and her sacrifices, or is she a society of true believers, where the pure word of God is preached, and the sacraments are rightly administered? If the former is the true idea, Romanism has decidedly the advantage; and the giddy should cling to her communion, and work for her purification; but if the latter is the proper description of the Bride of Christ, then all good men should separate themselves from Rome, as from an apostacy, protesting against her corruption, and enjoy the simple rites, and spiritual worship, and holy communion of the faithful in Christ Jesus.

This question must, manifestly, be determined by Scripture. We must search, also, for the Church of Christ, the New Dispensation, in the New Testament Scriptures. That which was old; the Mosaic order, the Temple and its priests and sacrifices, vanished away. When the fulness of time had come, Christ introduced his kingdom; and his apostles expounded his doctrines, and organized his followers. We look, then, in the society called together and established under the ministration of the Spirit, for the true idea of the Church.

The work of Mr. Litton is able, and highly instructive, as against Romanists, and their cousins, the Papalites and High Churchmen. To distinguish between Presbytery and Independence, and their various modifications, was not the author's object; but the great question being settled, as to the Romanist and their imitators, the differences among evangelical Protestants may be com- placently endured.

We commend the work to a careful reading.

LATE N. G. A. M. L. — Explorations and Discoveries during four years' wandering in the wilds of South-Western Africa. By Charles John Anderson. With numerous illustrations, representing sporting adventures, subjects of natural history, devices for trapping animals, &c. 12mo., pp. 55. New York: Harper & Brothers, Fifth Avenue.

Africa continues to be the favorite field of daring explorers, and adventurous sportmen. The press literally teems with their narratives; and with scarcely an exception, they have been valuable helps in portraying the features of the interior of that vast continent. This volume contains the narrative of explorations and discoveries during four years in the wilds of South-Western Africa, between the years 1850 and 1854. In the first journey, the region of the Damara, (formerly all but unknown,) and of the Ovambo, till now a terra incognita, were explored. In the second journey, the Lake Ngami was reached, and a way has been discovered by which commerce and civilization may eventually reach these regions. This book is less philosophical in its tone than the valuable one which Dr. Wilson lately published on Western Africa; but it is filled with stirring scenes of adventure, with narratives of hair-breadth escapes and descriptions of strange scenes, which will be quite new to most readers. As a work of travel, it is far more exciting than the journals of Denham and Clapperton, while it is much more literary and valuable in so far as the enlargement of our knowledge is concerned.

ESTIMATE OF METHODISM, Containing that portion of Cooke's Curiosities which relates to Methodism. By Rev. W. C. Boston: Whipple & Co. 1856. pp. 417, 12mo.

This is rather a caustic treatise, provoked by petty annoyances, in the city of Salem, Mass.

It is well known that Methodism is exceedingly aggressive in its spirit. It was so in its origin, and so it continues. Hence its many conflicts. If its combative ways were exhibited only against the powers of darkness, all true Christians would rejoice in it; but it does not go to the heathen with any great degree of effort, nor to lands enveloped in Popish darkness. This is well known.

This lent little volume, which is appropriately illustrated, is well suited to engage the young.

The story of the great navigator's life is told very clearly, and in an attractive manner, while the lessons which it teaches are unfolded. It is an excellent boy's book.

THE BIBLE IN THE WORKSHOP; or, Christianity in the Friend of Labor. By Rev. John W. McLean. 12mo., pp. 244. New York: C. Scribner, Broadway, and 370 Broadway. 1857.

This is a well written, excellent book; and we wish that all the sons of toil in our land, especially in our great cities, were possessed of a copy of it. It is exactly the kind of book to suggest to operates the themes on which they should meditate; and its perusal would, we doubt not, be instrumental in saving many whose minds are given to the study of the objects described in the body of the work.

THIS IS A CONTINUATION OF THE NARRATIVE COMPLETED IN "THE THREE GOLD DOLLS"; and we doubt not but that the number of young readers for whose amusement and instruction this little book has been prepared, will find it as attractive as they need desire.

THE ESTIMATE OF METHODISM, Containing that portion of Cooke's Curiosities which relates to Methodism. By Rev. W. C. Boston: Whipple & Co. 1856. pp. 417, 12mo.

This is rather a caustic treatise, provoked by petty annoyances, in the city of Salem, Mass.

It is well known that Methodism is exceedingly aggressive in its spirit. It was so in its origin, and so it continues. Hence its many conflicts. If its combative ways were exhibited only against the powers of darkness, all true Christians would rejoice in it; but it does not go to the heathen with any great degree of effort, nor to lands enveloped in Popish darkness. This is well known.

This lent little volume, which is appropriately illustrated, is well suited to engage the young.

The story of the great navigator's life is told very clearly, and in an attractive manner, while the lessons which it teaches are unfolded. It is an excellent boy's book.

THE BIBLE IN THE WORKSHOP; or, Christianity in the Friend of Labor. By Lewis Cheseam. 12mo., pp. 228. Philadelphia: Parry & MacMillan. 1856.

Dr. Cheseam's position in this work is, that the fortunes of Islam and those of the Church have been remarkably blunted from first to last. They cross each other's track in the patriarch's tent, in the visions of the prophets, in the creed of Mohammed, in the empires of the Saracens and Ottomans; so that in treating of Ishmael and his descendants, we necessarily follow them through the Church; for here their way lies." The relations of Ishmael to the Church, and his influence on its destinies from the days of his birth, through the patriarch to the fall of the Ottomans, are discussed by the author in a style clear and ornate, while the historical references and quotations which abound in the work, show the author to be intimately acquainted with the historical incidents connected with his subject.

BEAUMARISCH'S AND HIS TIMES. Sketches of French Society in the Eighteenth Century, from unpublished papers of Louis De Lomenie. Translated by Horace S. Edwards. 12mo., pp. 155. New York: Harper & Brothers, Franklin Square. 1857.

The True Idea of the Church has been a subject of dispute for ages. Protestants have their various shades of difference, some of which are of much importance, and which prevent a cordial fraternal union, and interfere with a harmonious testimony against error and a vigorous co-operation in the establishing and the spread of the true religion. But the main controversy is between Protestants and Romanists.

Is the Church a visible Society, with her visible head, her external unity, her priesthood, and her sacrifices, or is she a society of true believers, where the pure word of God is preached, and the sacraments are rightly administered? If the former is the true idea, Romanism has decidedly the advantage; and the giddy should cling to her communion, and work for her purification; but if the latter is the proper description of the Bride of Christ, then all good men should separate themselves from Rome, as from an apostacy, protesting against her corruption, and enjoy the simple rites, and spiritual worship, and holy communion of the faithful in Christ Jesus.

This question must, manifestly, be determined by Scripture. We must search, also, for the Church of Christ, the New Dispensation, in the New Testament Scriptures. That which was old; the Mosaic order, the Temple and its priests and sacrifices, vanished away. When the fulness of time had come, Christ introduced his kingdom; and his apostles expounded his doctrines, and organized his followers. We look, then, in the society called together and established under the ministration of the Spirit, for the true idea of the Church.

The work of Mr. Litton is able, and highly instructive, as against Romanists, and their cousins, the Papalites and High Churchmen. To distinguish between Presbytery and Independence, and their various modifications, was not the author's object; but the great question being settled, as to the Romanist and their imitators, the differences among evangelical Protestants may be com- placently endured.

We commend the work to a careful reading.

LATE N. G. A. M. L. — Explorations and Discoveries during four years' wandering in the wilds of South-Western Africa. By Charles John Anderson. With numerous illustrations, representing sporting adventures, subjects of natural history, devices for trapping animals, &c. 12mo., pp. 55. New York: Harper & Brothers, Fifth Avenue.

Africa continues to be the favorite field of daring explorers, and adventurous sportmen. The press literally teems with their narratives; and with scarcely an exception, they have been valuable helps in portraying the features of the interior of that vast continent. This volume contains the narrative of explorations and discoveries during four years in the wilds of South-Western Africa, between the years 1850 and 1854. In the first journey, the region of the Damara, (formerly all but unknown,) and of the Ovambo, till now a terra incognita, were explored. In the second journey, the Lake Ngami was reached, and a way has been discovered by which commerce and civilization may eventually reach these regions. This book is less philosophical in its tone than the valuable one which Dr. Wilson lately published on Western Africa; but it is filled with stirring scenes of adventure, with narratives of hair-breadth escapes and descriptions of strange scenes, which will be quite new to most readers. As a work of travel, it is far more exciting than the journals of Denham and Clapperton, while it is much more literary and valuable in so far as the enlargement of our knowledge is concerned.

ESTIMATE OF METHODISM, Containing that portion of Cooke's Curiosities which relates to Methodism. By Rev. W. C. Boston: Whipple & Co. 1856. pp. 417, 12mo.

This is rather a caustic treatise, provoked by petty annoyances, in the city of Salem, Mass.

It is well known that Methodism is exceedingly aggressive in its spirit. It was so in its origin, and so it continues. Hence its many conflicts. If its combative ways were exhibited only against the powers of darkness, all true Christians would rejoice in it; but it does not go to the heathen with any great degree of effort, nor to lands enveloped in Popish darkness. This is well known.

This lent little volume, which is appropriately illustrated, is well suited to engage the young.

THE BIBLE IN THE WORKSHOP; or, Christianity in the Friend of Labor. By Rev. John W. McLean. 12mo., pp. 244. New York: C. Scribner, Broadway, and 370 Broadway. 1857.

Africa continues to be the favorite field of daring explorers, and adventurous sportmen. The press literally teems with their narratives; and with scarcely an exception, they have been valuable helps in portraying the features of the interior of that vast continent. This volume contains the narrative of explorations and discoveries during four years in the wilds of South-Western Africa, between the years 1850 and 1854. In the first journey, the region of the Damara, (formerly all but unknown,) and of the Ovambo, till now a terra incognita, were explored. In the second journey, the Lake Ngami was reached, and a way has been discovered by which commerce and civilization may eventually reach these regions. This book is less philosophical in its tone than the valuable one which Dr. Wilson lately published on Western Africa; but it is filled with stirring scenes of adventure, with narratives of hair-breadth escapes and descriptions of strange scenes, which will be quite new to most readers. As a work of travel, it is far more exciting than the journals of Denham and Clapperton, while it is much more literary and valuable in so far as the enlargement of our knowledge is concerned.

ESTIMATE OF METHODISM, Containing that portion of Cooke's Curiosities which relates to Methodism. By Rev. W. C. Boston: Whipple & Co. 1856. pp. 417, 12mo.

This is rather a caustic treatise, provoked by petty annoyances, in the city of Salem, Mass.

It is well known that Methodism is exceedingly aggressive in its spirit. It was so in its origin, and so it continues. Hence its many conflicts. If its combative ways were exhibited only against the powers of darkness, all true Christians would rejoice in it; but it does not go to the heathen with any great degree of effort, nor to lands enveloped in Popish darkness. This is well known.

This lent little volume, which is appropriately illustrated, is well suited to engage the young.