The subject of this memoir was a constant, yet atient sufferer. He was scarcely ever heard to murmur, and could say in sweet calmness, in view of death, "My trouble is nearly over; I am willing to die, if it is the will of God, and I hope my death may be made instrumental in the conversion of many that are near and dear to me." The writer had the pleasure of visiting this dear boy frequently, and was always remarkably struck with his honesty, frankness, simplicity, and his knowledge of the plan of salvation in Jesus Christ. Why should we vex our hearts, or fast,

The sudden and unexpected death of Mr. Vaudivort, has cast a gloom over the whole commuspects, a model worthy of imitation. A fast friend of the Saviour, he found his way, amid sunshine and storm, constantly to the sanctuary on the Sabbath. As a member of the Church, he was always ready for every good work. In the relations of husband and father, he was kind and indulgent, delighting in his household. Eminently he was a man of peace, making it a matter f conscience to live peaceably with all men. And when the Master called for him, he had the satisfaction of knowing, (though suddenly called,) a higher place. His end was peace.
