

been expressed by not only the religious part of the people but by many others. The quiet of the dwelling houses and the churches on these lines has been disturbed, and if other roads should follow in this innovation, as they most probably will, it would attend the present attempt, there will be evidence of ad deterioration in the moral tone of the whole city.

Conservation is so strong an element in the character of the present generation, that new things, however great their merit, too often meet with much prejudice, and a cold reception from the public.

We are always glad to see real improvement of any kind duly appreciated, and therefore copy with pleasure, the following from the pen of the Rev. Dr. Kerr, concerning the new styles of artificial teeth:
