San Juan is a small island in the Straits which separate Vancouver's island from the continent. In our treaty with Great Britain defining the North-Western boundary, the parallel of 49° is the line Northwardly, and then Westwardly, it is the middle of the channel, in these Straits, leaving Vancouver's island to the English. It has been since discovered that there are two channels, one on either side of the San Juan. The main channel should, of course, be the dividing line. ... Until this should be determined, there was an understanding between the Governments that the San Juan should be held in common, neither assuming entire jurisdiction. Gen. Harney's assumption of rule, on the part of the United States, was hence not to have been expected. The Century, speaking of the origin of the difficulty, says: The starting point of the difficulty which led to the final occupation of San Juan by General Harney, did not first appear on the surface. Such affairs generally have a private history, be-ginning with some trifling event which is thrown nto the shade by the acts of real importance that follow. In the present case, the first step was one of an extremely trifling character. An American esident of the Island shot a pig belonging to a British resident. The latter made complaint to Fovernor Douglas, who sent his son to arrest the offender. The American declared that he would not be arrested, but that he would compromise by This was not acceded to, and he finally told the Governor's son that if he made a forcible attempt to arrest, he would shoot him. This was the first act of the drama which promises to end in what diplomatists call an imbroglio, to be followed, doubtless, by important negotiations between special ministers, and able letters from Secretary Cass, and a solemn conference at some Zurich or other, and then the reduction of everything to a peace footing. The question of ownership will, in the meantime, be definitely settled, and a cause of controversy which any trifling accident might ripen into a collision, be finally removed. The general tenor of advices from all quarters point to a friendly adjustment of the case. Lieut. Gen. Scott has been sent by our Government, with plenary powers. His prudence and firmness are invaluable in times of difficulty.

This steamer is designed to run on the coast of at Monrovia, and other points on the route. The requirements of Liberia for a vessel for this purpose, have long been evident.

Quiet and unobtrusive, humble and unostentations in her deportment, her example was always safe, and in the time of need she was reliable. Surgery is senerally too ready with the knife and the saw. The colat of a "brilliant oneration" is a great professional "card;" but the mutitated subject who has all the pain and none of the glory of the cutting and slashing, is by no means to be enyled. We have little doubt that in more than half the cased where the knife is used in hospitals and private practice, Holloway's inestimable Ointment would render its employment unnecessary.

When a College advertises "two hundred students in daily attendance," and you cannot see thirty in their classes, make a similar allowance upon all their other pretensions. Have nothing to do with a College that sends runners after you. And when a College Principal calls a runner to escort you from his office into the office, of another College, tell him you don't go in company with spier. Inquire of the City Merchauts or Bankers for the College whose Principal is a practical accountant of established reputation. Never expect to learn from a Principal, who cannot lecture, and take a leading part in what is taught in his school.
