

The Forest Burial. Rest thee, loved one! we have laid thee...

BY MRS. SARAH JAYES.

THE PRINTER.

"How dreadfully late you are, my dear!" said Mrs. Grayson, the wife of the printer...

"I wonder how I can help it," he replied in that desponding tone which proclaims one miserable alike...

"The job of advertising you did yesterday, I presume is the cause of your being so late," said she.

"Yes, but he said I must trust him while; as money was so scarce."

"Did you ever hear anything like it?" cried Mrs. G. indignantly—"money so scarce! why this is the hue-and-cry from one end of the country to the other."

"No, I saw him hauling a load to Mr. —, but he brought none here. You were in hopes that advertising for necessities would have the desired effect, but you see there is nothing more easy than to be mistaken."

"I think I was mistaken when I selected my occupation," resumed the printer bitterly. "Half the talent and energy (not to mention the labor) expended in any other pursuit, would have placed me ere this on the high road to independence."

"This is about the twentieth time this afternoon you have wondered the same thing, Father," said his daughter Hester, who sat at the window occupied with her worsted work.

"I believe I will," said the Squire, beating the Devil's Tattoo with his foot, there is no use in putting up with everything."

"Father, have you paid Mr. Grayson regularly?" asked Hester, with a mischievous glance directed towards her parent.

"Man's inhumanity to man, Makes countless thousands mourn," repeated Hester, slowly.

"Pardon me, my dear Father," she continued, more quickly, as she noticed his rising anger.

"I do not think those persons, possessed of wealth and many sources of comfort and happiness, can sympathize sufficiently with one in Mr. Grayson's situation."

"I wonder how I can help it," he replied in that desponding tone which proclaims one miserable alike, both in body and mind.

"I guess you must be thinking of taking one of the craft yourself, or you would not defend them so warmly," said the Squire, quite restored to good humor as he looked at his graceful child.

"They certainly are the victims of the greatest possible injustice," continued Hester, as she rose to follow after.

"I've got it Phalim, dear; you can chafe the bull, an' cross his field."

"Mighty aisy! I'll take along my fiddle, an' fascinate the baste. I'll give him Gary Owen, an' St. Patrick's Day in the Morning. Won't he be frisky?"

"Pat was as good as his word. Off both started to work and reached the dreadful field. Phalim's courage began to ooze out a little; so he got behind the stone fence, Pat gallantly entered the field.

"Pat! Pat! have ye fascinated the bull?" "No, be jabers! D—l a bit of it; but the rascal has fascinated me and the fiddle both!"

"What the end will be"—When I see a boy angry with his parents, disobedient and obstinate, determined to pursue his own course, to be his own master—setting at naught the experience of age, and disregarding their admonitions and reproaches—unless his course of conduct is changed, I need not inquire, "What will his end be?"

SARTAIN'S MAGAZINE OF Literature and Art.

GREAT INDEUCEMENTS TO SUBSCRIBERS FOR THE COMING VOLUME, JANUARY, 1851.

The publishers of SARTAIN'S MAGAZINE announce that they have completed such arrangements for the forthcoming volume as shall make it decidedly superior to all former issues.

The Editorial Department will continue under the control of PROF. JOHN S. HART, of Philadelphia, MRS. C. M. KIRKLAND, of New York, who, besides the constant contributions from their own pens, will continue to secure for it that unrivaled array of writers which has given to this Magazine such a superiority over all its competitors.

THE EMBELLISHMENTS FOR 1851. In this respect the present volume possesses a peculiar advantage. Mr. JOHN SARTAIN, Mezzotint Engraver, being one of the proprietors, gives the best fruits of his own skill every month, besides superintending and directing the other embellishments.

LIFE OF MAN AND OF THE YEAR, combined in the same pictures. The Magazine will also be enriched by a number of illuminated plates, produced by the beautiful art of mezzotint engraving, which will add greatly to the splendor of the work.

CELEBRATED ENGRAVER, FINDER, has engaged to execute a number of superb subjects on steel, expressly for this work, in a style of unsurpassed beauty.

SCENES IN THE LIFE AND TEACHINGS OF THE SAVIOUR. Designed and executed under the superintendence of CHARLES HEATH, of London, as artist.

THE REV. JOHN TODD, D.D., of Pittsfield, Mass., Author of "The Doctor's third Patient," etc., as Literary Editor.
