Easter and Lent.

There are many who have no definite idea of these Catholic customs. The Washington correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce furnishes some interesting information on the subject, in the annexed letter :---

"This is Easter Tuesday, and the Easter holidays are over-Easter which has been a holiday with Pagans, and is so still with some denominations of Christians.

We have, hereabouts, many of the old customs of Easter, which have been handed down from generations past, and from sources lost in the obscurity of tradition. The Catholics were, in former times, the prevailing denomination in Maryland, and the Protestant Episcopalians were the popular religionists in Virginia.

In each they were the prevailing, and in some sense the established denomination, until towards the close of the last century ; and they still flourish. The Eastern customs prevail here, perhaps, to a greater extent than elsewhere in the Union. The slaves have, to this day, a holiday on Easter Monday. The Easter eggs are still handed about-or pasche eggs, i. e. paschal eggs, as they are called in France. In the Greek and Roman Churches, Easter was celebrated as a grand festival, and the common people enjoyed it as a holiday. Among the Greeks the day was spent in rejoicings. The salutation of every one, as he met his friend, was Christos aneste, " Christ is risen.'

In Rome the Pope, when there was a Pope, used to go in the grand procession to St. Peter's, and assist in high mass. In named, no less than 20 hogsheads of sugar Turkey, Easter is still announced by twenty salutes of cannon, at break of day; and From Montgomery to Gouverneur sts., was sacrifices of animals are made amidst the a perfect overflow, and the Jackson ferry rejoicings of the people. In England, a had to close an hour earlier than usual, on working man would lose his caste, who account of the extreme height to which its worked on Easter. Englishmen try to bridge had been carried, tearing at the same amuse themselves-or did so in old times, on this day. The opening of the courts of ing the ladies' saloon. law, and the religious observances are still regulated in England by Easter. It is a scenes of extreme suffering were presented holiday at all the public offices except those on every side. The tide when it broke of Excise, Customs and Stamps.

During Lent, the people had so mortified themselves, that they were glad to throw off restraints, and indulge in good cheer. Hence arose a thousand customs, many of which still exist, all tending to conviviality. The priests, in the Catholic countries, used to divert their congregations with Easter | ing on their miserable beds with their effects tales or Fabulæ Paschales, i. e. funny stories. Some which I have are very lu dicrous, and yet inoffensive, and probably instructive.

Easter may be traced far beyond the era' of Christianity. It was a pagan observance, but was adopted by some of the early Christians, and applied to their religion. The Christians commemorate Easter as the resurrection of Christ, the festival origina ting in the idea that Christ was typified by the paschal lamb. With them it had its origin in the feast of the passover, as ordained by Moses. The word Easter is said to have been derived from the name of the Teutonic goddess Ostera, whose feast was celebrated early in the spring.

That word was derived from the word osters, which signifies rising, because nature arises anew in spring. The word East has

From the New York Express of the 17th inst. The Storm and its Effects. The storm, which in this vicinity has lasted about three days, is showing some signs of clearing off, at this writing.

The East River wharves nearly all the way from Corlear's Hook to the South Ferry, were overflowed. On the North River side, we have already stated, great damage has been done to property. Many poor families, residing in basements in that part of the city, have been driven from their homes.

At the South Ferry, the tide rose three and a half feet above its usual height, and from two to three feet above the common height of spring tides. The first twelve piers leading eastward from the South Ferry, being at a high elevation, were unaffected; but South street throughout this distance was completely swamped, and opposite piers 3, 5, 11 and 12, presented unbroken sheets of water. From Coenties Slip to Maiden Lane, the watchmen on duty were busily employed in taking goods from every cellar to which they could get access.

At about 9 o'clock last night, Franklin Saloon, under Franklin Market, was filled to the depth of twenty inches. Pier 15, which is sunk below the level of South street, was completely immersed. Cellar No. 69, containing a store of boots and hats has suffered badly. The water took its course up to Front street, each cellar on either side being entered. From the corner of Fulton, to Peck Slip, every cellar shared the same fate. Catherine Ferry appeared actually afloat. Piers 43, 45, 46 and 47 had the next visitation : from the first were rolled up by the watchmen on duty. time from its fastenings, and partly crush-

Throughout the whole of the First Ward, over the wharves on the North River came so suddenly on the premises located in the lower part of West street, occupied by a large number of poor families, emigrants. &c., that they were forced to escape, pell mell, and take refuge in the Station Houses. Sick families unable to move were seen lyfloating about them.

Severe Storm at the East. Immense Destruction of Property and Loss of Life—Shipwreck.

Boston, April 17, 1 P. M.

We were yesterday visited by a most terible storm and gale. The wharves are mostly overflown. The cellars of the Custom House stores, on Long wharf, were completely inundated, and the destruction of property thereby is immense.

The flats at East and South Boston are covered with water. The rails in a number of places on the Housatonic railroad have been washed up and the embankments carried away. The track on the Worcestor railroad is undermined beyond the dam. The Eastern railroad is also badly wash-the same origin, being the quarter where the sun rises. The ancient heathen feast was intended to celebrate the resurrection of nature; the Christian festival (which was substituted for it) the resurrection of Christ.

Lent, which precedes Easter, was also observed by Pagans, and the word is Teutonic, meaning the "spring time of the year." Lent is, perhaps, more observed in this immediate region than in any portion of the United States, so much so that it has a visible effect on our markets.

There is a difference of opinion whether it originally lasted forty days or forty hours, but the Church has established the period at forty days. The Catholics universally, and some Episcopalians abstain, during the season, from meat. They eat fish and eggs. and to use a phrase from Shakspeare.

"With LENTEN salads cool their blood."

Many of the Catholic observances of Easter are shown to have been derived from the Hebrew rituals, while others were of Pagan origin.

The Eastern or Greek Church was probably more indebted to Paganism for some of its customs, than the Western or Roman Church. As a proof of this, I refer to the ceremony noted by Dr. Clarke, the traveler, which prevails in the Greek Islands, of conveying Silenus in procession at Easter. This was also an ancient Pagan rite. If time the bell was also heard to ring. Silenus was a grave philosopher, as some assert, he presents a very merry aspect. I have an engraving of one, said to be after an etching from a sardonyx gem that belonged to the late Duke of Devonshire; and it is the very image of humor and gravity oddly mixed. This engraving is also a perfect representation of an antique comic mosque, in marble, which I possess. and which was presented to me by a friend who resides in Tuscany, and which is stated to have been taken from Pompeii. But if there was any doubt of that, it is removed by the description and engravings of the mosques in marble and bronze, taken from Pompeii, and belonging to the Town-send gallery in England. These are all identical with the figure, in the Easter processions in modern Greece, as described by Dr. Clarke.

This I mention only as one proof of the admixture of Pagan rites with the observances of the Greek Christians.
