Many of Sir Boyle Roche's blunders are happily preserved. "Sir, I would give up half-nay, the whole of the constitution, to preserve the remainder.' This however, was parliamentary.

Hearing that Admiral Howe was in quest of the French, he remarked, somewhat pleasantly, that "the Admiral would sweep the French fleet off the face of the earth."

By-and-by came dangerous times of dissatisfaction, and honest men's lives were insecure. Sir Boyle writes from the country to a friend in the capital this discouraging view of his position; "You may judge! he says, "of our state, when I tell you that I write with a sword in one hand and a pistol in the

On another occasion, when the famous letters to the Public Advertiser were attracting universal attention, Sir Boyle was heard to complain bitterly of the attacks " of a certain anonymous writer called Junius "

It was Sir Boyle who recounted that marvelous performance in gymnastics, when, in a tumult of loyalty, he "stood prostrate at the reet of his sovereign."

He it was who denounced in writhing language the apostate politician who "turned his back upon himself.

He it was who introduced to public refer the language. notice the ingenious yet partly confused metaphor of the rat. "Sir," said he, addressing the Irish House, "I smell a rat. I see him floating in the air; but mark me, I shall nip him in the bud."

There was his famous speech which There was his famous speech which confounded generations; 'I do not see, confounded generations; "I do not see; Mr. Speaker, why we should put our-selves out of the way to serve posterity; What has posterity ever done for us? He was a little disconcerted by the burst of laughter which followed, and proceed ed to explain his meaning; "By posterity, sir, I do not mean our ancestors but those who are to come immediately after them."

His invitation to the gentleman on his travels was hospitable and well meant, equivocal: "I hope my lord, if ever you come within a mile of my house; you will stay there all night."

It was Sir Boyle who stood for the proper dimensions of the wine bottle, proposed to parliament that it shouldibe made compulsory fthat every quart bottle should contain a quart."
Very pleasant, and yet perfectly intelligible, was his meaning—though it un-happily took the bovine shape—in rebuke the shoemaker when getting shoes
