I want my musketers lively.
But all this is foreign to my purpose.
I like waterfalls—they are so easy and natural. They attack all the sex.

Some they attack with great fury, while others they approach more like a siege, working up slowly.
I saw one yesterday.
It want no biger than a small French turnip.

It had attacked a small woman ov only nine summer's duration.

She was full of recreation, and when she bounded along the sidewalk—it was on the west side of St. Clair-street, in the City of Cincinnati, forenest Baker & Davis's yellow sope store—the waterfall highsted up and down in an oscillating manner, resemblin mutch the sportive terminus of a bob-tailed lamb in a great hurry.

The effect was purely electrick.

I saw another one pretty soon, which belonged to a mature matron.

She might have saw 75 summers; her hair was white as flour-Perkins "A" worth fifteen dollars a barrel deliverud but the waterfall was black.

I asked a by standard how he could account for that. He said "It was younger."

I also saw another one pretty soon, which was the property of a gusher. She was about 19 years old, and waz She was about 19 years old, and waz az ripe az a two year old peach.

BEAUTY IN WOMEN.—A beautiful face and figure are the two things in a women that first attract the attention of a man. The second is a fine taste, both in dress and habits, and the third is common sense. What a man most dislikes in a lady is untidiness, slovenly habits and affectation habits and affectation. There is a medium between prudery and relaxed behavior, which a man appreciates almost by instinct. Place a man of genial disposition, with a dis-engaged heart, in the society of a woman of beauty, sense and spirit—not too much of the latter—and the chances are of immediately falling desperately in love. The poor wretch cannot avoid it, and in his frantic efforts to escape, he falls on his knees and at her feet and avows the might and majesty of her beauty. All you have to do will be to treat the poor fellow as kindly as you can, and make no effort to please him. Let nature have her own way, and depend upon it, you will be fondly pressed to the warm bosom of some generous beauted follow. hearted fellow.

For real excellence and worth their stock has not its superior in the country, and it has already acquired a wide spread reputation. In addition to their own publications, their collection include the very best and most interesting ju-venile books that have issued from the prominent publishing houses in this country during the past three or four years. Each book is carefully examined, and none passes muster and finds its way to their shelves that is not of the highest order of merit. Parents and instructors of the young may rely upon it that no better books can be found to put in the hands of their chil-
