and without the least noise obeyed.

Mr. Allan walked on slowly toward the house. He had known Mr. Owens for many years, and he knew him well:
Indeed, there was a peculiar bond of sympathy between the two men. In all his large parish, there was not one upon whom the minister relied as he did upon the strong, sturdy farmer.
Many and many an hour he had walked by his aids when he was upturing TOLLET AND WASHING SOAPS, by his side when he was upturning the brown carth, and had discoursed with him on topics which would have sounded harsh and repulsive to common ears, but which were fraught with deep and vital interest to them. Mr. Owen was a direct descendant of the Puritans, and every drop of blood in his veins was tinged with as strong and true a "blue' as if he himself had landed in the May flower. He took naturally to the ster-ner doctrine of religion, while Mr. Allan, versed in all the modern lore, questioned and doubted. The key-stone of Mr. Owen could not break the seal for Owen's theology was the sovereignty of Cod—"Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" This was the man d upon whom God had now laid his hand so heavily; and Mr. Allan felt that if lows in which to live and die. Heknew that one element in this war was Purltan. Sons of the Roundheads filled up the ranks of the Northern army. They marched to battle to strains of the old tunes that had lingered in the nursery and the sanctuary from the day that Cromwell and his soldiers chanted them on Marston Moor. All down the aisless of time came tramping to the music, mailed men, bearing on their shields the two words, Liberty and Equality. They trembled on Mr. Owen's lips with his parting blessing to his boy. Would he parting blessing to his boy. Would he remember them, and would they com-Where there is afflction in a house,

Mr. Allan put a hand in the brawny one that was held out toward him, and laid the other on Mr. Owen's great, heaving breast. "My friend." he said, how is it with the decrees of God?"

"Just and true are all thy ways, thou King of saints," faltered out the man.

Mr. Allan looked in astonishment at Mr. Allan looked in astonishment at the bowed man as he came now and stood before him. These few hours had done the work of years. The sinewy of the words—"almost as it there over us all."

As he came near Farmer Owen's house he saw his oxen yoked to the plough. He knew they had been there since the telegraph came. Mr. Owen had read it in the field, gone to the house and forgotten them, and no one had dared to put them up. He was a man fully capable of taking care of his own affairs under any circumstances, never having been known before to forget.

THE FREEDMENS BILL, VETOED BY THE PRESIDENT.

AN ACT to amend an act entitled " An act to establish a Bureau for the relief of Freedman and Refugees," and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States you? I've planted it firm, and it don't yield; no, it don't yield, but the strain is terrible. God send it may carry me into port! O, Mr. Allan, say it will! It has seemed to me to-day so dark, so inscrutable, that he—my Bennie! Mr. Allan, there is a good, wise purpose behind it all. Can you see it?"

"To-night in the early twilight!

To bring you nearer the kingdom,"

"To-night in the early twilight!

To-night in the early twilight! of America in Congress assembled, That the act to establish a Bureau for the renind it all. Can you see it?"

"Amen," he said solemnly.

"Amen," he said solemnly.

"Amen," he said solemnly.

"Amen," he said solemnly.

"Amen."

"To-night in the early twilight I shall see the cows all coming home from pasture. Daisy and, Brindle and red such souls as mine are not worth one of my Bennie's. I can suffer, if I am too great a sinner for God's grace to save—but Bennie! I have sat here all day, since the news came, wondering, wondering, he was the said solemnly.

"Amen," he said solemnly

He read it carefully, then taking up in the use and enjoyment thereof for his pen wrote a few hasty lines, and rang his bell. Blossom heard this order given:

"SEND THIS DISPATCH AT ONCE."

The President then turned to the girl and said: "Go home, my child, and entirely upon her. Now she answered a gentle tap at the kitchen door, opening it to receive from a neighbor's hand a letter. "Is is from him," was all she said.

Blossom heard this order given:

"SEND THIS DISPATCH AT ONCE."

The President then turned to the girl and said: "Go home, my child, and tell that father of yours, who could approve his country's sentence, even when it took the life of a child like that, that Abraham Lincoln thinks the life far too precious to be lost. Go back, or wait until-to-morrow. Barniar!" wait until-to-morrow; Bennie will need their heirs and assigns, may purchase a change after he has so bravely faced the land and receive a title thereto
